Mitchell, Stans Facing Charges

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Former Nixon cabinet members John Mitchell and Maurice Stans were indicted today on charges they sought to obstruct an investigation by a federal agency in exchange for a secret $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon re-election campaign.

The federal grand jury also, indicted financier Robert Vesco, who made the contribution, and Harry Sears, a former republican leader of the New Jersey senate, who testified earlier he delivered the money to Stans in Washington.

Mitchell, former attorney general, and Stans, former secretary of commerce, had earlier testified before the grand jury investigating the contribution by Vesco to the Nixon campaign.

Vesco left the country while the matter was under investigation. Mitchell at the time said he testified "fully, frankly and freely."

Vesco, 37, was under federal investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission at the time the money changed hands. He and 41 others had been accused in a civil suit by the SEC with milking four foreign mutual funds of $224 million and is now believed to be in Costa Rica.

Former White House counsel John Dean, meanwhile, claimed today that "there is a concerted effort to get me" and vowed again that he would not take the blame for other top administration officials in the Watergate scandal. He will testify before a Senate committee investigating the affair, Friday.

Dean's statement followed a series of reports about him — some saying he was prepared to link Nixon to bugging cover-up efforts and some saying both government and senate investigators had concluded that Dean had no such evidence.

In his statement, Dean said the information contained in unspecified news stories was "neither complete nor accurate," but declared that "truth will emerge" ultimately in the Watergate case.

"Efforts have been made to prevent me from obtaining relevant information and records; attempts have been made to influence the handling of my testimony by the prosecutors; restrictions have been placed on the scope of my testimony as it relates to the White House; and blatant efforts have been made to publicly intimidate me," Dean said.

U.S. Would Expel Canada

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The United States is trying to expel Canadian fishboats from American waters on both the East and West Coasts, Fisheries Minister Jack Davies charged Wednesday.

His comments came after Cliff Levelton, director-general of fisheries operations for Canada, announced the collapse of Canada-United States treaty talks in Seattle.

Levelton said he gave formal 60-day notice Tuesday to the U.S. that Canada will extend salmon net fishing to the 12-mile limit and lengthen the trolling season to give Canadian fishermen a bigger share of the Pacific catch.

One of the Canadian changes will allow Canadian vessels that net salmon off the west coast of Vancouver Island to operate out to the 12-mile limit. At present such craft can fish only within headland-to-headland lines drawn across the mouths of bays and inlets.

Levelton said the talks broke down because Canada wanted to cut the U.S. share of Fraser River sockey and pink salmon to one-quarter from the one-half set out in the 1937 International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Treaty.

"Talks just bogged down," Levelton said. "We are being treated unfairly, yet there was no attempt by the Americans to reach accommodation in a moderate way."

He said the Canadian mission, which he led, proposed an interim solution, but this also was rejected.

It suggested that each country reduce by five per

CONSUMERS 'SPOILED'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has accused price-conscious consumers of being "spoiled" by low food costs.

"I know consumers are angry about rising food prices," he said in a speech to the Ottawa-Carleton Liberal Association, "the fact of the matter is that consumers have been spoiled by the low food prices we have been enjoying for more than 20 years."

Consumers have been spending less and less of their income on food, while receiving higher and higher quality and built-in convenience."

Whelan, a southwestern Ontario farmer, has been the Liberal cabinet's most vociferous spokesman at a time when consumer groups have organized to boycott products in an effort to curb rising costs.

But Prime Minister Trudeau has said the minister is merely speaking his own mind when he comments on the subject.

Whelan said Wednesday that improved farm efficiency has made the "slow rate of price increase" for food possible. But poor weather last year cut into production, particularly in the east, and prices moved up accordingly.

World droughts last year, rising demand for red meat and a poor fish catch off Peru this year also contributed to increased costs. Fish is used for protein in livestock feed.

To offset increases, Whelan again called for all-out farm production and ambitious marketing efforts by the government.

New Crisis Facing Dollar

LONDON (UPI) — Rumblings of a possible new international money crisis developing in European markets again brought the U.S. dollar under pressure today.

The price of gold continued its ominous rise and banks and dealers said the movements were almost carbon copies of preludes to previous crises.

The run on the dollar began Wednesday with a strengthening of the West German mark, occasioned by reports that Bonn intended to revalue its currency and take fresh counter-inflation measures. The rumors were denied later in the day.

"In March there was only a rumor of a new dollar devaluation. Now there are renewed fears following the Watergate affair and the looming crisis in the Middle East," a top money man said here today.

The pound continued strong, selling against the U.S. dollar at $2:50735. By mid-day it moved to another peak of $2.50875.

Gold in London touched a new peak fixing of $94.60, up $1.60 from Wednesday's close.

"There was no real sign of a recovery in the dollar, but the weakness may be cushioned by the Thursday settlement factors that usually aid U.S. currency," one foreign dealer said.

The dollar rallied a little in Frankfurt, changing hands at 2.8355 marks.

In Bonn, the government today proposed heavy new taxes on income and investment and further liberalization of imports as part of a frontal attack on a boom that is pushing prices up at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent.

Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt and Economics Minister Hans Friderichs told a news conference the cabinet approved the 21-point package of anti-inflationary measures at an after-dinner session Wednesday night.

"The main purpose of this program is to reduce purchasing power and liquidity and pressure on prices, which therefore should end anticipation of price rises in wage negotiations," Friderichs said.

ICCS Going Broke

Times News Services

SAIGON — The peace supervisory force in Vietnam is in danger of losing some of its essential services unless it receives a new injection of capital soon to pay private contractors.

The commission requested additional financial support about two weeks ago from the four parties to the Paris peace agreement sources said today. But so far no replies have been received and resources are rapidly running out.

The commission has already received initial payments of about $1 million from each of the parties.

However, the ICCS has been unable, for a variety of reasons, to draw up a firm operating budget which would set out specific requirements. Therefore, it has asked for a matching payment to the initial one.

One ICCS source commented that "since the four parties seem to want us here, it's a little puzzling there has been no action."

Meanwhile, private contractors who supply most of the basic services for, the ICCS are becoming extremely reluctant to continue their operations without payment.

The old International Control Commission had a dismal credit record, resulting at one time in companies cutting off water supplies to the Canadian delegation.

Many local firms seem to fear that the ICCS is following the same trend.

Meanwhile, military sources said today in Phnom Penh Communists had shifted the brunt of their offensive Wednesday from there to the northern part of the country.

Fierce fighting both north and south of the capital claimed heavy casualties, however.

Border War Rages On

United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas attacked Lebanese army posts at a half dozen points along the 150-mile Syrian -Lebanese border today, and Tel Aviv dispatches said Israel had sent a brigade of battle-hardened troops to the occupied Golan Heights near the battle area as a "routine summer training exercise."

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv refused to say how long the exercises had been planned.

They involve planes, tanks, artillery and helicopters. Censorship prohibits disclosure of how many men are in the brigade.

Arab leaders, meanwhile, conferred in Beirut and other capitals on ways to preserve the third Lebanese ceasefire in eight days of fighting between guerrillas and the army.

There was scattered shooting in Beirut today but military leaders lifted the 24-hour curfew twice to let residents buy food.

Despite the cease-fire, the Labanese army called up "specialized reservists." It said all reservists, except officers, "should report to their regional headquarters for the military authorities to select the required number."

Evidence of big power fears of worsening Middle East situation also came from Beirut where Soviet Ambassador Servar Azimov conferred minutes with president Suleiman Franjieh during which Beirut radio said he delivered an oral message from the Kremlin leaders.

Contents of the message were not disclosed but both U.S. and Soviet diplomatic sources have expressed hope there would be no major explosion before the summit conference this summer between President Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev.

Diplomatic sources in London reported earlier this week that the United States had made similar representations to Israel.

U.S. Steel Price Up

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The U.S. Steel Corp. today announced a 4.8 per cent price increase on its sheet and strip products which are widely used in the production of automobiles and household appliances.

Other producers were expected to follow U.S. Steel's lead.

The United States' largest steelmaker said the increases would become effective with shipments of June 15. The price hikes were well within the limits established by the economic stabilization program, it said.

Borrowers Booked

PHOENIX, Ariz. (Reuter) — During the past six months, 133 persons have been arrested and five jailed for failing to return overdue books or pay library fines. Librarian R. W. Henderson says the law which permits the arrests and also makes book stealing a criminal offence punishable by six months in jail, is effective.

Kaiser Purchase

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Mitsubishi Corp. and its Japanese coal customers today announced a planned investment of $27.5 million to purchase more than seven million shares of Kaiser Resources Ltd. at $3.80 a share.

World Court Bid

THE HAGUE (UPI) — Australia and New Zealand filed suits Wednesday in the International Court of Justice in an effort to stop France from carrying out more nuclear tests in the Pacific. The suit said France violates international law and the United Nations by continuing the tests.

4,000 Deported

OTTAWA (CP) — An estimated 4,000 visitors were ordered deported during 1972, the Commons was told Wednesday in a written response to a question by Steve Paprowski (PC—Edmonton centre). No precise figures were available, the government said. There were 11,875 people awaiting deportation hearings by the immigration appeal board at the end of December.

Two Kidnapped

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — An 11-year-old boy and a 20-year-old man were kidnapped here today, the first such incidents since the military government imposed a death penalty for abductions under the martial law declared May 1. The new cases were the 38th and 39th reported in Argentina this year.

Lull Broken

BELFAST (UPI) — The army said gunmen shot and killed a part-time soldier in an ambush at the end of a country lane today, Northern Ireland's first death in secular violence in nearly a week. The killings, and Ulster's 3001st bomb blast that injured a mother and her four children in Protestant Catholic rioting during the night, broke a four-day lull that began after three British soldiers were killed Saturday in booby-trap explosions.

Canada Comes First

Times News Services

TORONTO — Canadian oil companies say they won't export extra gasoline to the fuel-hungry United States until they are sure Canadian customers have enough.

Imperial Oil Ltd., a subsidiary of Exxon in the U.S., said it has been "barraged" with requests for gasoline from dealers south of the border.

"We haven't had much surplus lately anyway and that is the only gasoline we would consider exporting," a spokesman said Wednesday.

The company's last sale of gasoline to the U.S. was a surplus one million gallons from the Winnipeg refinery in January, he said.

U.S. oil companies have said they expect gasoline shortages in some parts of the country this summer.

Any shortages in Canada this summer will likely hit independent, not name-brand dealers, he said.

However, Lawrence Woodruff, president of CFM Ltd., Toronto, said present gasoline supplies are tighter than usual. CFM, a jobber, buys surplus gasoline from refineries and sells it to independents.

"I think there will be a squeeze on the independents and I think some marginal ones will have to close because they never should have been

DINNER STACKED

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time in years, President Nixon drew less than a million-dollar gate Wednesday night, when he spoke at a Republican fund-raising dinner at the Washington Hilton hotel.

Surveying a $1,000-a-plate audience of 1,500 — more than one-third of them freeloaders — Nixon said:

"I shall always remember this group tonight — remember that when the going was tough, you hung in there."

Making his first major public appearance since the Watergate scandal triggered a series of top-level resignations from his administration, Nixon told the faithful: "I don't stand here tonight as a loser. We are winners."

He promised to make the next four years "better than the last four."

Sponsors said the event would gross about $750,000 and net perhaps $600,000.

Two years ago at a similar dinner, the receipts totalled about $1.5 million. Last September, a nation-wide set of Republican banquets, linked by closed-circuit television, grossed over $6 million for a single Nixon speech.

Dealer May Be Their Only Firenza

Owners of Firenzas, the trouble-ridden cars imported by General Motors, will probably get compensation from car dealers before they get it from the manufacturer, according to Michael Hanson, provincial consumer affairs director.

"Anyone who has followed the case will see that, so far, the people who have got satisfaction (in unloading their cars) have got it from the dealers," he told a meeting of the Grace McInnes NDP Club Wednesday.

He said he has "no doubt there will be court action before this thing is settled."

And, he said, he expected the provincial Sale of Goods Act would be the legislation which would apply.

Under this well-tested act, it is the seller who must assume primary responsibility for the quality of the goods he sells. The seller in turn, of course, would have recourse against the firm that sold him the product.

Hanson noted that recent amendment to the Sale of Goods Act prevented sellers from waiving their primary responsibility through the manufacturers' warranty.

Hanson told the meeting if the market of supply and demand has been upset, it is the fault of both consumers and merchants.

"Shopping in just one or two shops, rather than shopping around for the best buy in each item, clearly destroys the concept of the market of supply and demand," he said.

On the other hand, "there are far too many monopolies, particularly in the food industry . . . for there to be any market of supply and demand operative."

Hanson said his office, which operated under the department of the attorney-general, has experienced a large increase in activity — investigating consumer complaints and enforcing consumer protection legislation — since it was formed in January 1970. This has been particularly true since "new MLAs have given us considerable attention," he said.

Ellsberg Bugged 2 Years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The FBI has told the judge in the Pentagon papers trial that wiretaps of Daniel Ellsberg's telephone conversations were started nearly two years before he released the Pentagon papers to news media, the judge said today.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne, apparently angered because he was never told this in earlier disclosures of wiretaps, ordered the justice department to find out how many times Ellsberg was overheard in 1969 and 1970 and if there are records of what was overheard.

He said the FBI report says that at least one interception was made while Ellsberg was at the home of Morton Halperin, a former deputy assistant secretary of defence.

This was the first disclosure that Ellsberg, whose name did not surface publicly until 1971, when he released the Pentagon papers, had been under FBI surveillance long before that.

Byrne told the government today to find out for how long Halperin's home was under surveillance and whether the surveillance was authorized by a court.

"I'll talk to you later, Al. Harriet said that my steak was ready, whatever that is."

Nixon Picks New Men

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today picked CIA Director James Schlesinger as defence secretary and added John Connally to his White House staff as a special adviser in moves to plug holes left by the Watergate scandal.

Nixon also abandoned his "super-cabinet" concept of counsellors; promoted William E. Colby to CIA director and named Pentagon general counsel J. Fred Buzhardt Jr. to his White House staff as a special counsel with "full responsibility in matters relating to the Watergate investigation."

The series of actions to bolster his beleagured administration were disclosed first by Nixon at a cabinet meeting, then announced by Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler at a White House news briefing.

The presidential decisions came 10 days after Nixon's closest aides — H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman — and Attorney-General Richard Kleindienst resigned amid a swirl of Watergate developments.

Nixon has nominated Elliot Richardson to succeed Kleindienst as attorney-general, leaving vacant the Pentagon post which Schlesinger was picked to fill.

Nixon told his cabinet he intended to maintain more direct communications with cabinet members, Ziegler later reported.

cent a year the size of its catch of the other's fish.

"Over-all, there would be no real loss. We would cut our catch of U.S. fish, but on the other hand they would be taking less of ours. But we couldn't get agreement on this," Levelton said.

Davis said in an interview that the breakdown in the Seattle talks is the result of the "very hard line" being taken by the Americans on both the Pacific and Atlantic coasts.

"The line they took in Seattle was the same taken a month earlier in Washington concerning fishing on both coasts," the minister reported.

"They really told us a month ago that they wanted us out of all their waters," he said.

Davis, however, would not go so far as Levelton, saying that no final decision has been made by Canada on how to counter the U.S. pressure.

He said it is incorrect to say that talks have broken off, preferring to say they were adjourned without any agreement being reached.

The minister said that when the U.S., through ambassador Donald McKernan, special assistant to U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers, took its hard line on the overall fisheries question a month ago, Canada suggested the two countries try to reach agreement on the specific question of the Fraser River salmon fishery. This apparently failed as well, he said.

But he added that the two countries will have an opportunity to continue negotiations in Washington in June on over-all fishing question.

Davis said that the U.S. is trying to get Canadian fishermen out of the nine-mile strip between the three and 12-mile limits off the Washington and Oregon coasts.

The American concern is ove rthe number of U.S. hatchery-produced fish which Canadians are catching, he said.

"They are pressing us. We haven't been precipitating this, they have," Davis stressed.

. . . WATERGATE

Dean, it was reported today, was involved in helping cover up not only the Watergate bugging, but also a scandal last year concerning International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

The settlement of an anti-trust suit against ITT had been linked to $400,000 the corporation donated to the Republican party convention last year, syndicated columnist Jack Anderson claimed.

"Dean was behind the suppression of 34 cartons of documents that ITT had delivered under subpoena to the Securities and Exchange Commission," Anderson said.

"These papers included confidential memos which contradicted sworn testimony of then attorney-general John Mitchell at the ITT hearings in Congress and implicated vice-president Spiro Agnew and former treasury secretary John Connally in the ITT anti-trust fix."

The Senate committee Wednesday released a list of 20 prospective witnesses for its first round of hearings.

Sources said the list was drawn so that the committee could trace the planning and financing of the bugging of Democratic headquarters through President Nixon's re-election committee and to explore possible White House involvement in an alleged coverup.

Included on the list, as well as Dean are other former White House aides H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, and Charles W. Colson. Also scheduled are Mitchell, former acting FBI director Patrick Gray, former deputy Nixon campaign manager Jeb Stuart Magruder and Nixon's former personal attorney, Herbert Kalmbach.

The witnesses, in the tentative order that they will be called, are:

Robert Odle, former office manager for the Committee for the Re-Election of the President; Sgt. Paul Leper, a Metropolitan police officer who participated in the arrest of five men inside the Watergate on June 17; James McCord, former security director for the re-election committee and a convicted Watergate conspirator; Sally Harmony, former secretary fo convicted Watergate conspirator Gordon Liddy; and Robert Reisner, a former aide to deputy Nixon campaign manager Jeb Stuart Magruder.

Howard Hunt and Liddy, both convicted Watergate conspirators; Hugh Sloan, former re-election committee treasurer; Herbert Porter, former re-election committee scheduling director; Powell Moore, former press aide of the re-election committee.

Frederick La Rue, former aide to the re-election committee director; Stans, director of campaign fund-raising for the re-election committee; Mitchell, Gray; Ehrlichman, and finally Haldeman.

In another development CIA director Arthur Schlessinger told a Senate subcommittee that Ehrlichman paved the way for Central Intelligence Agency co-operation with Hunt that ended in the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist in 1971.

Schlesinger described the agency's role in the Ellsberg case as an "ill-advised act."

He also disclosed that former CIA director Richard Helms personally instructed officers of the agency to assist in the preparations of a pschiatric profile on Ellsberg during the White House investigation of intelligence security leaks in 1971.

It was the first time that Helms, who was replaced by Schlesinger early ths year, figured by name in the growing controversy over CIA involvement in the Pentagon Papers case and its dealings with Hunt, a member of the Watergate bugging team.

Imperial Gas Up One Cent

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Imperial Oil has increased its gasoline prices one cent per gallon, bringing its rates into line with the other major producers.

The price increase applies to all Imperial petroleum products including heating oil, diesel, turbo fuels and asphalt as well as gasoline.

Imperial said the one-cent-a-gallon increase was necessary because of the .7-cents-a-gallon increase in the price it pays for crude oil.

The increase applies in all provinces west of Quebec. Imperial had increased prices in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces by an identical one cent a gallon April 26. The company said that increase was necessary because of increased charges by overseas crude oil exporters.

The company, in announcing the increases, said the chain of events begins in the Middle East where increases in crude oil prices affect the price of gasoline in eastern Canada.

In addition, the price of Mideast crude forces up the price of western Canadian crude oil, which forms the basis for gasoline sold in Canada from Ontario west to the Pacific Ocean.

Most dealers in Victoria today are selling gasoline at 54.9 cents regular and 59.9 cents premium, although some larger ones are selling at one cent cheaper, which is the Vancouver rate.

Discount stations and department stores sell about six cents below the top Victoria rate.

A car wash company claims the lowest gasoline rates in Victoria at 46.9 cents regular and 51.9 premium. The firm used to give free car washes and sell gas at regular rates. However, it has changed its policy to selling gasoline at a sharp discount rate and charging $1 for the car wash.

The company said customers can purchase gasoline without being obliged to purchase a car wash as well.

. . . ENERGY

in the business in the first place."

The industry is anticipating a normal increase in demand for gasoline of between five and six per cent this year, a demand it can handle, one official said.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government today rejected mandatory gasoline rationing, but called on the petroleum industry to adopt a voluntary system for allocating supplies.

The plan asks suppliers to make available to each of their customers the same proportion of gasoline as they received before shortages developed.

The purpose is to make sure independent gas stations, which often buy "branded" gasoline and sell it under their own labels, are not denied fuel and forced out of business.

Suppliers also are asked not to charge independents more than other customers.

If vital consumers — like farmers, doctors and police departments — are left without enough gasoline, the government may direct suppliers to sell to those customers. But such orders could not control the sales of more than 10 per cent of the suppliers' total supply.

But, giving the government a little clout to back its voluntary system, the Senate interior committee today approved a bill which would authorize President Nixon to ration crude oil and refined petroleum products, including gasoline.

Acting with unusual speed on a major bill, the committee sent the measure to Senate floor for immediate consideration after only an hour's discussion.

The bill would authorize the president to allocate petroleum products when he finds there are extraordinary shortages or dislocations in the distribution of petroleum products.

Stasiuk Fired

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vic Stasiuk was fired today as coach of the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League.

Club directors said his one-year contract as coach would not be renewed, but said they'd like the 42-year-old NHL veteran to stay with the club in another, unnamed capacity. Stasiuk refused to comment on the offer. He said he was leaving for his home in Lethbridge to think it over.

The Canucks won 22 games, tied nine and lost 47 under Stasiuk, finishing seventh in the eight-team Eastern Division.

. . . FOOD

He realized that rising prices hurt the "bottom third of our people on low incomes," Whelan said, "but I don't think farmers should shoulder the full burden for society of providing cheap food."

Finance Minister John Turner, meanwhile warned the Commons Wednesday not to count on a system of price and wage controls to solve the problem of rising food prices.

He appeared to rule out at this time, as Prime Minister Trudeau did a month ago, any immediate move by the federal cabinet to invoke its contingency plan for price and wage controls.

The Progressive Conservatives in the house introduced a motion Wednesday—an official opposition day — deploring the "failure of the government" to take "concrete and effective action against the rising cost of living."

The Conservatives said the government's failure to act was evident in the price of shelter, food and clothing. The opposition party motion urged the government to impose an "immediate freeze" so as to enable it to develop a satisfactory plan in conjunction with the provinces, industry and labor, for the purpose of keeping the cost of living within "acceptable limits."

Under the rules the motion cannot come to a vote so does not pose a threat to the minority government.

When the house opened Wednesday Allan Lawrence (PC — Northumberland-Durham) asked if the consumer and corporate affairs minister, Herb Gray, had forumlated any guidelines for clothing prices this year. He said these increased 1.4 per cent last month and are expected to go higher in the months ahead.

Gray said any policy along this line would be announced in due course. He also said he had made no inquiries among the clothing industry representatives about their price intentions. However he said he would take under consideration a suggestion from the opposition that he make such enquiries.

Marguerite Starts Season Afloat—and Awash

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

"Are you going for a cruise with all the fat cats tomorrow?" joked Victoria Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

Of course it wasn't quite like that.

Police Chief Jack Gregory, Ald. Percy Frampton, Tom Denny, Harold Elworthy and a gaggle of press types were there too.

But Canadian Pacific Railways (marine division) always makes sure that government, business and press are well represented when they inaugurate the Princess Marguerite's summer sailing schedule each year as they did again Wednesday.

And they bait the trap nicely.

Rye, gin, scotch, rum, beer and even a few bottles of diet drinks for the "fat" cats.

Then it's down two decks to a groaning board, salmon, prawns, shrimp, cold roast beef and sundry other delicacies.

Everything is well done.

Just as some of the boys are thinking of seconds up pops young Paul Denny.

"We will be favored with two or three renditions from Miss Dorothy Cook of the Empress," he says.

She launches into a rouser.

". . . he left his kilt and sporran, and went off to warrin! What made the Jerries run was not his tommie gun, Twas the toorie on his bonnet . . ."

We finished our coffee with "How Are Things in Glocca Morra" and Jane Froman's old standard, "I Believe."

The applause was loud and Miss Cook blew kisses to the assembled throng.

Meanwhile, the Marguerite's 15,500-horsepower engines are taking us around in circles in Juan de Fuca Strait.

Tom Denny reminisced about the ships that sailed the Gulf Islands in earlier days.

There was the Charlotte . . .

"She nearly drowned me," said Denny laughing.

But close calls or not, Denny was certainly in favor of the corporation.

"CPR ships moved about 25 million pounds of consumer merchandise for me to Vancouver Island," said the beaming furniture store owner.

Once again a round of applause.

Now it was Harry Tyson's turn.

The balding man with the mirthful glint in his eyes has been with CP since 1924. He has risen from telegraph boy to the head man of CP's marine operations here.

In a few months he will be retiring of his own choice.

Most persons present knew Tyson and the praise was fulsome. For his part he hoped that he could sail the good ship Marguerite many times in the future.

Upstairs the whisky and talk were flowing again.

And most of the guests gulped a quickie or two as the Marguerite nudged into the Inner Harbor.

No streamers or bands answered her steam whistle. Just an overalled workman from Bapco Paint who sauntered out and raised his yellow hard hat in mock salute.

It was a sobering welcome after all that king crab and salmon.

AN UMBRELLA DOESN'T work on a swing as six-year-old Chad Kantz of Lethbridge found out during a playtime squall. He found it was more of a drag than a help, since it slowed down the swing almost to a dead stop.

More Jobs, Training Sought In Victoria SWAG Brief

More job opportunities and training facilities should be opened to women, according to Victoria's Status of Women Group.

A list of these and other recommendations will be presented at the Western Conference on Opportunities for Women at the University og British Columbia this weekend by Joan Island of SWAG's economy group.

The conference is being financed by the provincial government and the department of manpower and immigration.

The recommendations note that women are limited in choice of work by the amount of time they can spend away from home and the types of jobs available to part-time workers.

SWAG recommends more part-time jobs be created and asks for a special branch of Manpower designed to help industry discover areas where part-time workers could be hired.

The brief states that at present industry uses part-time work to avoid paying normal fringe benefits required for full-time employees.

"This practice must cease and those employees who work less than full-time must not be required to subsidize profits of business," the brief states.

SWAG also suggests that groups of two or three women share one full-time job—each working part-time and sharing both the job and babysitting.

The brief criticizes Manpower's performance when women apply for jobs or training. The brief states that women clients "do not receive anywhere near the same training opportunities as men and are automatically limited to only a few areas—primarily clerical.

SWAG asks for job training for women in such fields as the para-professions, truck driving, driver testing, child care, journalism, dental hygiene, geriatric care, and advertising.

The recommendations also ask Manpower to: stop stereotyping jobs and allow any women capable to train for any job, encourage management training for women, allow academic as well as occupational training, grant women the same stipend for families that is paid to men who take re-training sourses, give Manpower counsellors up-to-date training and establish better channels of communication with the community.

AN EASY RIDE FOR WOMEN

Women's rights had an easy ride at Belmont Secondary School today.

The occasion was a two-day Unesco conference on human rights attended by 150 high school delegates from across the province.

The first topic, women's rights, was debated by five outspoken females who all professed support for women's liberation, in degrees ranging from radical to cautious reaction.

The students were less wholehearted in their support as they laughed and cheered at comments made from opposing sides.

Sitting under a sign which read If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem, Yvonne Cocke, wife of the B.C. health minister, emerged as a radical.

In a friendly, hard-hitting talk which drew the best and loudest response from students, Mrs. Cocke said:

"I am a housewife, a mother of four daughters, I've never worked since I got married and I'm not looking for a job. But that's no contradiction.

"I'm a radical women's liberationist."

The Canadian government, she said, displayed one of the greatest put-downs of women in its Canada Pension Plan.

"How dare they say I don't qualify as a contributing citizen of society just because I choose to stay home, raise a family and do volunteer work," Cocke said.

B.C.'s new director of human rights, Kathleen Ruff was on hand for the debate and told students they must look at the discrimination actually occurring in society, not at what rules and rights are on the statute books.

Former Socred cabinet minister Isabel Dawson argued that the fight for women's liberation has been a long historical battle that has taken great steps forward, but still has a long way to go.

The conference continues today and Friday with three more panel discussions on different aspects of human rights.

Food Jump Due

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States government figures indicate supermarket food prices this year will climb 10 per cent. If confirmed, it will be the biggest jump since an 11-per-cent climb in 1951.

Highrise for Aged Studied by City

A $4½ millios 14-storey waterfront senior citizens' apartment and care building at the boundary of Victoria and Esquimalt was slated for recommendation to city council today.

City planning chairman Ald. Mike Young said he did not forsee any problems, assuming a minor borderline dispute involving a neighboring property owner could be cleared up.

Wellington Foundation, a non-profit body headed by Vancouver architect Norman Jones, is seeking a land-use contract for the project at Seaforth, Maitland and Roberts Streets, and plans have been approved by the city's advisory planning commission and advisory design panel.

The scheme includes just under 300 bachelor and double apartments for old people, and a special care home providing semi-nursing home care. A range of stores at street level in the single highrise tower is designed to produce revenue to reduce rents, targets for which are about $115 for a dual unit and $100 for a bachelor unit.

The scheme is financed by the federal Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Jones, president of the foundation which is building a similar project in New Westminster, said the project should be complete within 16 months if it starts this summer.

He said he is completely in favor of provisions in the contract to insure public access to the beaches on the waterfront part of the property.

Down to the Sea in Pipes

Reports that the end of the mine waste outfall at Jordan River can be reached at low tide by wading reinforces the belief that Mr. William Venables, provincial director of pollution control, was on the right track two years ago when he turned thumbs down on the mine's application for a permit to discharge tailings into the sea.

Mr. Venables' recommendation was reversed by the Pollution Control Branch, but certain conditions were laid down: the pipe must extend 1,500 feet from shore and discharge must be at a depth of 40 feet below low tide level; there would be a limit of one million gallons a day, and regular tests would be made to detect toxic materials in the discharge.

A break in the pipe, causing the waste to be deposited close to the beach, has brought the matter again to public attention. At the same time it was disclosed that the mining company has applied to have the conditions changed so that the coarse element in the waste may be discharged into only 10 feet of water, while the fine tailings will be taken farther to 40 feet.

The whole concept is made farcical if the contention of a Sooke engineer and Capital Regional Board member, Mr. Howard Elder, is correct. He says that he walked to the end of the pipe's outfall on May 5 at low tide and was only knee-deep in water. He says further that the pipe could be laid so as to conform to the regulations but that the present arrangement has never worked properly.

The Pollution Control Board took a compromise position two years ago, in the interests of the mine and its employment possibilities. But the regulations were designed also to protect the environment and the public which enjoys it. Clearly, the present situation calls for a thorough investigation and a demand that the mine operators live up in every way to the conditions that were specified.

There seems to be a need for closer supervision of the outfall, and some of the public fears expressed at the time of installation have apparently been borne out. Poor enforcement of any rules leads to disregard of others; the Pollution Control Board should make no exceptions.

". . . just the BOAT, Caldwell . . . just the BOAT . . .!"

A Change of Name but Not of Quality

The pending government takeover of the local Children's Aid Society, which has operated the Family and Children's Service in Greater Victoria for many years, can be criticized on the grounds that it is removing the identity of a social welfare agency that has done an excellent job. For 77 years, under various names and with various mergers, the organization has ministered to children, unwed mothers, needy persons, foster parents, and many other categories.

It began as the humane effort of a dozen ladies representing half a dozen city churches who formed a group to give material help to needy persons, and much later expanded into adoptions, counselling and other facets of public assistance. The spirit that motivated the original group has never changed. The Family and Children's Service has written an honored record in this community.

It is understandable, therefore, that its enforced passing as a semi-public organization should bring protests and regrets. But the writing may have been on the wall for some time. The work, of course, has been conducted under the provisions of the Protection of Children Act, and consequently under the authority of the Superintendent of Child Welfare. It will not be a revolutionary change, therefore, to bring the work directly under the provincial department.

Except for Vancouver and environs, child care throughout the province is conducted directly by the provincial government. The local move is part of a planned general undertaking to bring all such work into the department, and later under the auspices of the regional boards. There need be no lowering of standards.

Another factor in the situation is that for some time the provincial government has provided almost the total budget of the Family and Children's Service. The local contribution to the work had dropped to little more than support of marriage counselling, a very minor aspect of the agency's program. With financial responsibility goes control of operations, and the result is seen today.

It is true that control by a local board supported at least in part by local funds gives a greater flexibility in operation, and a greater opportunity to undertake new projects and meet new needs. Such trial services are often later supported by government finances when they have proved their value. This will be less likely under a province-wide authority, but much will depend on the attitude of the government in charge.

Despite a radical alteration in its identity, the agency should continue to give its traditionally excellent service to this community. The workers who have gone before, or who serve today under Director Gordon Wright, have set a level of outstanding service to people. All who come later will have a high example to follow.

VICTOR MACKIE

Canada and Common Market

OTTAWA — Canada, if she plays her cards right, should benefit in the long run from Britain's entry into the European Economic Community.

That in essence is the conclusion of government economists and trade experts, who have been assessing the impact on this country of Britain joining the European Common Market and preparing for the GATT negotiations this autumn.

The official British line has been to reassure Canadians that over the long haul it will benefit the British and the Canadians that the United Kingdom has joined the EEC. Visitors from the British government who visit this capital keep repeating these assurances. The High Commission pounds home that point.

Not Convinced

There are some members of the Canadian cabinet who are not convinced.

However, government experts have been re-assessing the situation. Their conclusion: Britain has not exchanged a tight little island for a tight little Europe.

The biggest blow to Canada is that British membership in the common market will result in elimination of Canada's long-standing preferential access to the British market. Britain is adopting the common external tariff and the common agricultural policy of the EEC.

Canada had no part in the direct negotiations carried on between Britain and the EEC and between the EEC and other applicant countries. However with the prospect of less favourable conditions of access for her exports to Britain, this country obviously has a number of major interests that stand to be adversely affected.

Since early in 1970 the Canadian government and the business community have taken opportunities to ensure that the British and Europeans were fully informed of these Canadian interests. Canadian ministers, commencing in September, 1970, undertook a series of consultations with European governments concerning the negotiations for entry of Britain, Denmark, Ireland and Norway into the EEC.

As a result some results favorable to Canada were achieved.

It is recognized now that British entry could have adverse effects on a number of Canadian exports to Britain. But the effects could be largely offset first by a stimulation of Britain's growth rate which ultimately could benefit Canadian exports, and secondly through Canada's well established presence in the U.K.

JOHN DAVIES
. . . sees more trade

This includes strong commercial and financial contacts at all levels of business and government. It was realized that they would provide a spring board to expand sales to other EEC countries.

Government studies indicate that the impact on British exports to the Canadian market will be felt most on those now enjoying commonwealth preferences. These will face competition particularly from the United States and Japan, Canada's other major trading partners.

There could be a risk of serious damage to particular sectors of established Canada-U.K. trade. As a result, on the British entry it was suggested that Britain and Canada should continue to strive to make special trading arrangements.

It is recognized that Canada, while rich in natural resources, is a relatively small industrialized country lacking duty-free access to large trading groups. This country must use every effort to expand trading opportunities wherever they can be found.

The enlarged EEC provides such an opportunity and it will be in Canada's interest to work with it and not against it in the coming years.

Increased Trade

Mr. John Davies, the British minister responsible for common market affairs, recently told newsmen in London that he foresees a sharply increased level of trade and investment between Canada and Europe once the Common Market has adjusted to the addition of Britain, Ireland and Denmark. He warned however that the increase will also depend upon a successful round of multinational trade talks.

If those trade talks are not successful the effect on future Canadian trade would be very damaging he has warned, to which Canadian government officials say "amen". A lapse into protectionism would be the worst possible development in the trading world for this country which depends on exports to survive and prosper.

Those multinational trade negotiations involving the EEC are scheduled for the fall. Mr. Davies is optimistic. He thinks they will be a successful round of talks but cautions that the negotiations could continue until 1975.

Watergate Gets in the Way

LONDON — The Watergate scandal could scarcely have come at an unluckier time for President Richard Nixon's diplomacy, the broad principles of which he has just outlined publicly in his state of the world message to Congress. His domestic political position is seriously undermined just when he is facing a complex series of negotiations on trade, money and defence, not only with his European allies but also with the Soviet Union.

Mr. Leonid Brezhnev, Russia's Communist Party boss, having himself apparently just won a battle against Kremlin hawks for his foreign policy of co-operation with America, is soon to visit Washington for his second round of summit talks, which began with President Nixon in Moscow last May. Mr. Brezhnev is looking for trade and economic co-operation with the United States on an unprecedented long-term scale. Mr. Nixon wants, in return, a Soviet commitment to troop cuts — mutual and balanced force reductions — in Central Europe and further agreements in the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) to limit strategic nuclear weapons.

Obstacle Removed

For both Brezhnev and Nixon U.S. withdrawal from the Vietnam war removed an obstacle to closer Soviet-U.S. co-operation. It was seen in the White House as enabling the President to turn his attention more fully to other international problems, such as the state of U.S. relations with Europe and Japan and eventually the situation in the Middle East.

Europe was chosen first because in many ways this is "the year of Europe". The European Community, enlarged to include Britain, Denmark and Ireland, is taking its first steps toward achieving an economic and monetary union together with appropriate political institutions by 1980. A re-definition of its relations with the United States, though most immediately urgent in the field of trade and currency, also seems inevitable in the longer term in foreign policy and defence.

At the same time, a parallel attempt is being made to re-define relations between Western and Eastern Europe. It began with West Germany's "Ostpolitik" — Bonn's treaties with the Soviet Union and Poland, her agreements with East Germany and the four-Power agreement on Berlin.

It will be developed this year on a broader scale at the European Security Conference expected to be held in Helsinki in June and in the talks between North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and Warsaw Pact countries likely later in the autumn on mutual balanced force reductions.

The American approach to these negotiations with allies and adversaries, especially with Europe, was outlined in broad but vague terms by Dr. Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's special adviser on foreign affairs in his recent speech calling for a "new Atlantic Charter." The impact of the speech has been blunted by the Watergate affair. But the essential new points noted — not always with approval — on this eastern side of the Atlantic were the linking of U.S. - European economic and defence relations in one general problem, the inclusion of Japan in the "Atlantic" framework, and the appeal for U.S.-European co-operation in dealing with the "energy crisis."

SIR ALEC DOUGLAS-HOME
. . . separate strands

Dr. Kissinger's linking of trade and defence — a theme repeated in Mr. Nixon's message to Congress — was oblique and discreet. The assurance that U.S. troops would stay in Europe went together with a reminder that America should not be expected to accept more than her fair share of the burden of European defence.

In other words, the United States will not cut her troops in Europe without agreement with her allies and without compensating reductions by the Russians, provided her European allies help her solve the balance of payments problem which is one of the causes of domestic pressures to bring U.S. troops back home. But in the bargaining over trade and monetary problems Washington clearly wants to make full use of its political credit in Europe.

The Europeans, especially the French, want to keep the question of American forces separate from the negotiations on trade and currency. The French, despite their Gaullist anti-Americanism and detachment from the NATO integrated commands, are the most fervent in pressing the United States not to reduce her troops in Europe. The British believe domestic pressures may eventually force the American Administration to make some reductions, but they are intensely sceptical about getting the Russians to agree to reductions on their side which would really offset the American cuts.

Monetary Reform

The British Foreign Secretary, Sir Alec Douglas-Home, speaking to the Western European Union in London, has more or less endorsed the French view that the different strands of negotation — military, trade and money — should be kept separate as far as possible. He singled out talks on reform of the international monetary system as the most urgent need.

An agreement which stabilized the relations between the dollar, the main European currencies and the Japanese yen would be an important step in easing America's balance of payments problem. And to this extent it would also help the White House to resist Congressional pressure for troop cuts in Europe.

For the European Community, too, a monetary reform is urgent because the instability of international currencies imposes intolerable strains within the Community, especially on such arrangements as the common agricultural policy. It was the effects within Europe of the last dollar-mark crisis which made it so difficult for the agricultural ministers of the European Nine to reach agreement last week on a new price arrangement for farm produce.

Medicare

As one who believes in and fought hard for medicare I was dismayed by the article "Health care costs zoom out of sight."

In spite of the fact that the vast majority of doctors are completely honest in their dealings with their patients and the B.C. Medical Plan there are, of course, some who abuse their powers and I know that many doctors are worried about the image which is being created in this regard.

As a retired businessman I have suggested many times to the government that patients should be obliged to sign for visits to their doctors but I am afraid that I have had little success in getting my view accepted. I realize that the average patient cannot possibly be expected to know the details of the treatment he is given but at least I feel that, if we were obliged to sign for each and every service provided, this would at least provide some control. Although I carefully examine and at times question the accounts rendered by the B.C. Medical Plan for services provided to my family I wonder how many of our citizens take similar action.

I believe that equal medical care for all is a God-given right and it distresses me to see that the system has its abuses. Of course the system of "fee for service" is unsatisfactory and is open to abuse and my feeling is that the federal and provincial governments must face this issue head-on with the medical profession as we must not allow this very worthy social achievement to be defeated by the few who abuse the scheme.

Of course, to me it is most distressing that a few of these highly skilled and professional men would lower themselves to abuses which are condemned by the vast majority of their profession. However, it is encouraging to see that members of the profession are themselves perturbed about the situation and will undoubtedly take action. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar Ave.

Porcupines

I would like to correct the impression given by the story that you printed in the May 2 issue of the Victoria Times, "The Last Porcupine Wasn't . . .".

I did not, as the story inferred, say that there were porcupines from Nanaimo to Sooke. I said that since 1968 there have been reports of porcupines in Sooke (a pet), Metchosin (killed in someone's drive, probably another pet), Duncan (released from the defunct Duncan Zoo), Nanaimo (killed on the highway). All these animals were in all probability introduced to the island by man.

I would also like to mention that it was found in the post mortem done on the Downey Road porcupine that there was no trace of egg in the porcupine's stomach, nor on its fur.

I would be very grateful if you print this letter as we set ourselves up to inform the children of the Victoria area about the habits of their native fauna and so we cannot afford to be even slightly misquoted on the subject. — Clio Matheson, Director, The Wildlife Reserve of Western Canada.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of May 10, 1913:

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The right of print paper made from the woods of the Crown Lands of British Columbia to enter the United States free of duty under the only operative clause of the Canadian reciprocity agreement is being investigated by the state and treasury departments.

British Columbia is the only province from which Crown Land paper comes in. Western wood and paper manufacturers have protested to the government that the contractual relations between British Columbia and the Powell River Company, which sends the Crown Land paper in free, are such as to impose a restraint on the exportation of lumber and wood pulp. Such restriction would prevent free entry of lumber, wood pulp and paper of the lands affected

Conflict of Morals

By JOSEPH R. STAROBIN

(Starobin is professor of political science at Glendon College, York University in Toronto. He wrote this article for The Globe and Mail.)

In the extraordinary spectacular called Watergate, which the world watches with fascination and contempt, a certain macabre satisfaction as well as a definite awe, it may be overlooked that Americans have been grappling with matters that do not seem to bother other peoples: they have been trying to uphold a standard of public morals that has been eroded by private practice.

Americans are agonizing over the contradiction between the morals of their business-oriented, individualistic society in which pushing, shoving, conniving, image-making, image-worshipping, hustling and huckstering have brought undeniable success to individuals and society, whereas the requirement of public policy in a democracy that bears a heavy responsibility for its own destiny and the world's is another matter.

A nation, it turns out, is not a stock market. Efficiency, crew-cut precision in carrying out objectives cannot be confused with the strategic integrity that sees the public interest as a whole, the planning that sets objectives greater than the sum of the parts, the loyalty to ideals and to sacred institutions.

Americans have had particular trouble with these distinctions in the postwar age when so much changed for them so swiftly. The shift from the producer of goods of reputation to the manipulator of finances in a market of built-in obsolescence has coincided with a techonological change which exalts "information" and builds databanks on every conceivable subject with devices that invade privacy, give instantaneous dossiers on everybody and everything.

To "draw a Dun and Bradstreet" has been routine in business practice. To extend this technical service to every aspect of a citizen's life has coincided with the rise of men for whom the work ethic ceases to mean either work or ethics.

For have not professors of political science told us that in this post-industrial age the lines between business and politics become blurred, and into the forefront come educated men (sometimes only half-educated men) who are worshippers of the power that comes from manipulating men and money?

I am not suggesting that the Republican Party has had a monopoly on such types: the Democratic councils also swarm with them. Nor am I saying that these are the dominant forces in the business world. But there are enough of them. And their behavior conflicts with the central myths, indeed the necessities of politics.

As regards the myth, Americans believe their politics must be an honest game. Like athletics, it must not be rigged: it must be played hard but fair. To "throw a game" destroys the inner moral purpose which makes it worthwhile. This is not to deny the widespread corruption on the lower levels.

But the White House has always been distinguished from City Hall. And what is possible for sheriffs and police court judges and tinhorn politicians has been taboo on the presidential level. Lacking an aristocracy, and lacking the monarchical institutions which make villainy a secret and keeps the monarch above suspicion as he metes out private justice, the Americans have clung to a vision of the presidency which is their only substitute.

Exactly here Watergate demonstrates the U.S. failure. The reason why Americans recoil in horror is that the failure touches their most sacrosanct myths and endangers them at a point of the greatest vulnerability.

By surrounding himself with small men with great power, indeed attracting such men since the President is himself the very personification of this postwar breed, Richard Nixon now finds that the suffusion of the worst practices of the business world undercuts the efficiency which was so deceptive in his White House staff. He also finds that in playing the game of politics unfairly, that is, by gouging the groin of the opponent and seizing on the jugular, something elementary and basic has been threatened.

Can Mr. Nixon, the very personification throughout his career of the characteristics of his closest associates, be the man to change the tone of U.S. life, its standards and values, just as he has tried to change its foreign policies?

One would like to think so. This would have a certain historical justice about it. Perhaps only through the agony of a man who so typifies the confusions of public and private life can the country come out of its tunnel.

Yet is also seems improbable. It is questionable whether Mr. Nixon is the man to resolve the inner U.S. crisis: he can only personify it and deepen it until he is replaced by a different homo politicus, perhaps someone who combines older conservative decency with radical humanism.

In the meantime, the United States presents the spectacle of vast troubles for the very reason that it is a laboratory of business-oriented, popular democracy secreting the drugs that threaten its destruction, but also its own immunizing, regenerative antibodies.

The United States was always a peculiar, ambitious experiment. What has been tested at Watergate are not methods of government alone, but the premises of conduct in a society whose own practices undermine its own ideals, but whose ideals are important and will have to outlive and reshape its practice.

Family Allowance Makes No Sense

By ANTHONY WESTFELL

OTTAWA — Family allowances have become so much a part of our lives and social security system that we seldom stop to question the principle. But if you think about them, what is the logic of making payments based on the number of children in a family?

Are we trying to increase the birth rate — the more kids you have, the more money you get? That would be ridiculous in the age of the population explosion.

Are we saying that families with children have higher costs than people without children and therefore need special help?

That might make sense if we took into account the incomes of the families. But it is obvious nonsense to pay the same degree of state support to the family with four kids and $8,000 a year as to the family with four kids and $30,000 a year. Yet that is what we do with universal family allowances.

The comforting illusion is that we tax back the allowances from the $30,000-a-year family. But we don't, because the top rate of personal income tax is about 60 per cent, declining to 50 per cent under tax reform. So even the wealthiest family pays back in income tax only about half the allowances it receives.

★ ★ ★

So who does pay for family allowances? The answer is all those people who do not have children. They may be hard-pressed themselves, verging on poverty perhaps, but they contribute through their taxes to allowances to the wealthy who have kids.

The government recognized the injustice of the system in its 1970 White Paper on income security. It proposed to relate allowances to need by cutting off payments to families with incomes above $10,000 and increasing them to lower-income families.

There was a good deal of criticism of the plan, led by the New Democrats who objected to the creation of two groups in society, those who would receive cheques and those who would not, depending on income. There was also resentment among middle-class wives who were accustomed to use the cheques as pocket money which came directly from Ottawa to them, instead of through their husbands.

Frightened by the loss of middle-class votes in the October election and dependent on NDP support in the Commons, the government has given in to the pressures, and by raising the family allowances to $20 a month for all, it is simply compounding the injustice of the old scheme. Those without children will be paying even more to those with children, regardless of need.

It's sad to see Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who once promised to do away with all "that free stuff" and tell people honestly what social security costs them, now reverting to the old political trick of bribing the voters with universal welfare schemes.

★ ★ ★

It's sad to see NDP Leader David Lewis endorsing a monstrous rip-off of one section of the community by another, on the blind basis of how many kids they happen to have. It's sad to see Conservatives who surely should stand for selective, rather than universal, welfare applauding the new scheme.

The last hope was that the provincial welfare ministers would see the flaws in family allowances and reject the federal plan. After all, they had been arguing for a long time that social security is really their responsibility, and had been asking Ottawa to turn over money to them to spend according to their own priorities. But last month, they came out in favor of the federal plan.

Now Ottawa is blandly proposing to spend an extra $1.2 billion on family allowances which will not go to the root of social need. Surely the provinces could find ways to get the money to those in poverty, rather than to those with kids.

Think about it. Family allowances really don't make sense.

INDIA PUTS ITS LEFTISTS IN JAIL

By MOHAN RAM

(From an article in the U.S. socialist weekly, The Guardian.)

NEW DELHI — There are currently an estimated 30,000 political prisoners in India. Over 90 per cent of them belong to various Marxist-Leninist groups.

Most of them were arrested during agrarian struggles in the states of West Bengal, Bihar, Orissa, Andhra Pradesh and Kerala since 1968 and during the urban guerrilla campaign in and around Calcutta in 1969-70.

A good number of these prisoners have been held for as long as five years without being brought to trial or even formally charged. Under Indian law, they can spend up to seven years in prison without entering a courtroom. Even when brought to trial, hearings are put off under the flimsiest of pretexts and the process drags on endlessly.

Prisoners ordered released by courts, when the charges against them fail, are often re-arrested within the courtroom building on new fabricated charges. Or they are picked up again under one of the preventive detention laws.

Some young revolutionaries are tagged with as many as five or six separate charges at a time and cannot afford to hire lawyers. Under preventive detention laws, the government does not have to prove anything.

Thus, it is not surprising that there have been frequent clashes in Indian prisons. Last year alone, 830 prisoners died in clashes with guards. The official versions of their deaths are the familiar ones — shot while attempting to escape.

The Marxist-Leninist political prisoners belong to a number of different organizations. Unlike the two largest left parties — the pro-Soviet, Communist party of India and the Communist party of India-Marxist — these groups do not see electoral struggle as the main tactic. They advocate a new democratic revolution, similar to the Chinese revolution, based on agrarian revolution and people's war. But they are divided on a number of questions. The movement has grown since 1968 but it has also splintered into various groups.

The Indian government does not recognize these revolutionaries as political prisoners but treats them like ordinary criminals. This is hardly surprising since the government officially looks at the left challenge as little more than a mere law and order problem.

Indian prisons represent the 18th century concept of penitentiaries. They are overcrowded, bursting at the seams according to the government's own admissions. Poor quality food supplied by corrupt contractors with whom officials collude, terrible sanitary conditions and inadequate medical facilities make prison life a virtual hell. Dreadful, incurable diseases have taken a heavy toll among political prisoners. In order to buy food, starving prison inmates have been forced to sell their blood at less than $1.50 for 200 cubic centimeters.

Outside prison, the government has other means of repressing political opponents. There have been allegations of summary executions of captured revolutionaries. This happened largely in Calcutta city when the urban guerrilla movement reached its peak in 1970. Most of the victims came from lower middle class, working class or peasant backgrounds.

Calcutta police, very possibly in connection with gangsters, carried out a new kind of counterinsurgency warfare. "Police guerrilla" squads in plainclothes drew political activists into confrontations in order to kill them. The operation was made to appear like encounters between rival political groups or factions. Criminals were also enlisted for engaging revolutionaries in street battles and murdering them.

In the countryside, where a higher form of class struggle had developed, the methodology was different. In a vast tribal tract of Srikakulam district in Andhra Pradesh, the guerrilla movement reached its highest level in 1970 when embryonic liberation zones appeared around hundreds of villages. The struggle had advanced to the level of guerrilla squad actions and encounters with government forces. The military freely executed prisoners.

The Pentagon Goose

RUSSELL BAKER

This is a Pentagon story, and you will probably not believe it. The truest Pentagon stories are never believed until it is too late. Remember the C-5A? Remember the TFX? Remember the electronic wall around Vietnam? Remember Vietnam?

Each of these stories was told in plenty of time to stop it, but all anybody said was, "Quit kidding and be serious." So here is another you won't believe. People never learn.

The main character in this story is a goose that had been living on a farm in Delaware until a few years ago when the Pentagon was carried away by the idea of developing new weapons based on animals.

What sparked it was an idea for attaching torpedoes to dolphins or porpoises or whatever and aiming them at other people's ships. Nowadays, when we think about the difficulty of maintaining a porpoise's zeal for dying for the free world, the idea seems a little weak, but at the time it was refreshingly different.

Weapons development then was all electronics and hardware. It had become so complicated that it was no fun anymore except to Hungarian scientists. With the idea of armed cetaceans, however, the scales fell from the eyes of the Pentagon's most original thinkers and animal weaponry became the rage.

★ ★ ★

One of the most impressive results was the herd of 40,000 elephants which the United States keeps poised on the Alpine border of Italy. They have been conditioned to eat nothing but spaghetti. If starved for five days and aimed southward over the Alps, they can be turned into a ravenous assault force. This American retaliatory power is, in fact, the only reason the Italians have not dared raise their wine prices as arrogantly as the French.

In any case, the goose of our story was taken from the farm in this period and brought to Washington. There it was given a security check, a serial number, a lecture on venereal disease and a reserved parking space at the Pentagon.

The goose was baffled. When he went to the animals' mess for lunch and tried to enter the other animals' conversations, everybody would break off and wander away.

Finally, the goose called in his secretary and asked why everybody was avoiding him. She promised to tell him if he would meet her for lunch at a drive-in near Quantico which, a general had assured her, was not bugged by the FBI, CIA, Soviet Embassy, Israeli intelligence, military intelligence, naval intelligence, the Secret Service or the District of Columbia Metropolitan Transit Police.

There she told the story of the Capitoline geese. How Rome had once been saved from barbarians sneaking up the Capitoline Hill by a few geese whose honking had wakened the Romans in the nick of time.

This had given the Pentagon an idea. Why not develop a goose whose honking could save the Pentagon?

For years, the Pentagon's most embarrassing bungles and expensive bailouts had been leaking to Congress and the public. Not because of enemy spies. Worse. Because there were certain false spirits employed by the Pentagon, but nevertheless willing to tell where the bungles were buried.

The goose, who hated both politics and history, was stunned with boredom when his secretary woke him. "You," she said, "are to be developed into a tattletale detector, capable of honking a warning the instant you sense the presence of any Pentagon man capable of giving Congress information."

"You're crazy," the goose told her. "Nobody at the Pentagon has ever developed a weapon that cost less than $3.5 billion. A goose you can buy for peanuts."

"Not a goose capable of seeking out, identifying and honking at tattletale bureaucrats," said his secretary. "To develop you for that mission they intend to cross you with $3.5 billion worth of electronics."

★ ★ ★

The goose thought of a ruse to avoid his fate. He decided to pretend that he could already detect and honk out tattletales. To demonstrate, one day when 17 vital Pentagon titans were gathered in a nearby conference room, the goose strolled in, flexed his neck at each of them and honked alarmingly. He was served at lunch the next day in the flag officers' mess.

Weapons development moved on to an experimental animal cracker which, dropped by the megaton on enemy territory, will create 21 per cent more cavities and, if not eaten, will attract cockroaches.

All-Out Scramble Develops for Global Oil Supplies

PRICES COULD DOUBLE, THEN REDOUBLE

By RONALD KOVEN and DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Japan has told the Middle East oil producers that it will not join an American effort to organize a bloc of major petroleum-consuming nations to counteract the spiralling price demands of the powerful oil-producers cartel.

Without Japanese participation, it is generally conceded that the American proposal for an oil consumers organization, including Western Europe the world's third major industrial energy user, is doomed to fail.

Unless some other approach is devised, the likelihood is an all-out scramble for Middle East oil resulting in the doubling and redoubling of prices in coming years.

"The bidding is already starting," said James Akins, the top state department petroleum planner, referring to competition for the oil in the Persian Gulf area.

More than anyone else, the Japanese are now waging a campaign to stake out special relationships with the gulf's sheikhdoms and kingdoms.

The Japanese point out, however, that France and Italy have been seeking guaranteed oil supplies for some time and that the Americans and British already have access to all the Middle Eastern oil they want or need.

"Japan is not the only disturbing factor" in the world petroleum picture, said a Japanese diplomat, who stressed that his country has almost no domestic oil reserves.

Yasuhiro Nakasone, the head of MITI, Japan's powerful Ministry of International Trade and Industry, said in Kuwait and Iran last week that Japan cannot accept a "common front" of oil-importing nations. He called instead for an "understanding" between the oil-producing and oil-consuming nations.

MITI has been pressing for a conference later this year to bring together the producing and consuming nations and the oil companies in an umbrella organization for the world petroleum industry. So far, there have been no takers. Such a group would most probably be so broad as to be ineffectual.

Most U.S. officials and oilmen profess to be puzzled about Japan's real intentions. While the Japanese keep everyone guessing, they are busily scouting in Europe, North America and the Middle East to determine the plans and resources of other countries. Meanwhile, they are aggressively competing for exclusive petroleum resources in the gulf.

The Japanese say they have two basic oil policy goals — acquiring secure petroleum supplies and getting the oil at a relatively low cost. These two objectives often seem contradictory, for exclusivity costs extra money.

Each time the Japanese pay more than the going rate, the gulf states use the new price level to force more than their other customers. Yet, no matter how high the Japanese have bid up prices, there has always been someone coming in behind them willing to pay still more.

Many American oilmen express fear that Japan may already have decided to go it alone. But U.S. officials maintain they are not worried about that — "Yet."

Last week, while Nakasone was touring the Persian Gulf countries that constitute the world's major oil reservoir (Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi and Iran), a nine-man Japanese delegation was here looking into Texas and Louisiana offshore oil operations and the possibility of extracting oil from Canada's huge tar sand deposits and talking to oilmen and officials in New York and Washington.

One of these officials complained that the Japanese came prepared with a list of penetrating questions about U.S. policy, but that they were totally unwilling to discuss Washington's questions about Japanese plans. He said he told them that he would not receive any more Japanese oil groups unless they came prepared to give as well as to get information.

U.S. officials say, however, that they think that Japanese statements in the Middle East about shunning a consumers' cartel are for local consumption and reflect Japanese fear of confrontation with the gulf states. The Japanese conduct the lowest-profile policy of any major state in the Middle East. Japanese companies are notable for the care with which they observe the Arab League's boycott against Israel.

The Japanese profess to be particularly worried now by a recent warning from Saudi Arabia's influential petroleum minister, Sheikh Zaki Yamani that the establishmnet of a consumers' cartel against the highly successful organization of petroleum exporting countries would mean a petroleum "war."

Meanwhile, as the world tries to puzzle out Tokyo's policy, Japanese groups, with government financing and support, are seeking to tie down their own sources of oil anywhere they can find it. Japanese exploration and development projects are already in operation in Alaska, Canada, Peru, Colombia, Zaire, Nigeria, Australia, Indonesia, Thailand, Malaysia and South Vietnam.

All of Japan's major industrial groups are also jointly involved in seeking a deal with the Soviet Union to develop Siberia's oil and natural gas deposits. It was announced Monday that Japan expects to triple its imports next year from mainland China, to three millions tons.

But the only place the Japanese can get the quantity of oil needed to slake their industry's growing thirst is in the Persian Gulf. Nakasone recently said that Japan must depend on the Middle East for 85 per cent of its oil for at least five more years.

MITI, the guide and co-ordinator for overseas activities of Japanese industriest, has officially proclaimed the goal of securing 30 per cent of Japan's oil needs exclusively from Japanese-controlled sources. So far, Japan has tied down less than 10 per cent in this way.

The ministry's own Petroleum Development Corp. Provides 70 per cent financing for new Japanese oil ventures. This, and MITI's close relationship with the major Japanese industrial conglomerates, make it possible for the Japanese to offer highly attractive package deals, including economic development loans, oil barter arrangements, and investment opportunities in Japan for the excess Arab oil income.

There seems to be a jiu-jitsu quality about the way the Japanese have turned recent U.S. pressures against Tokyo's economic policies to Japan's advantage. The Americans complained about the exclusion from Japan of foreign investiors, so Tokyo opened the doors and used the new investment opportunities as part of its package deal search for oil.

Washington complained about Japan's accumulation of $20 billion in monetary reserves, so, Tokyo has started funding its oil deals with the government's dollar hoard.

Nakasone said Tuesday after a cabinet meeting in which he reported on his nine-day tour of the gulf that he will recommend immediate revision of Japanese law to permit the purchase of oil refined in the Middle East. The law now provides that crude oil must be imported for refining in Japan. This change will clear the way for the Japanese to help Middle Eastern countries expand and build their own refineries in a step to develop local industries.

The separation of business and government in the United States makes it extremely difficult for the Americans to match such terms.

There is a growing feeling among U.S. energy policy planners that the American oil industry and the U.S. government will have to take a lesson from the Japanese, despite all the implications of government regulation of the oil industry.

U.S. Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs William Casey told a New York business group Monday that "we may need the American counterpart of the Japanese trading corporation," an apparent reference to Japan's MITI.

Hardly a week goes by now without the announcement of a new Japanese deal or offer to the big Middle East oil producers. "Every time you turn around over there, you bump into a Japanese," said one American oilman here.

Among the most recent examples of the deals the Japanese are making in the Middle East are the following:

—The Japanese oil industry in early January bought a 22.5 per cent interest in British Petroleum's rich offshore field in Abu Dhabi, paying an astonishing $780 million, about twice as much as the previous bidder, West Germany's state-financed Deminex, which had offered $190 million for a 13.2 per cent interest.

—Japan's Mitsui group entered a $300 million joint venture with BP, the Abu Dhabi Oil Co. and a French company to build a gas liquefcation plant to provide the Tokyo Electric Power Co. with gas, starting in 1976.

—In early April, a delegation of the Japanese Petroleum Development Corp. visited Saudi Arabia and offered a $500 million deal under which the Mitsubishi conglomerate would build a huge petrochemical complex in return for 200 million barrels of crude oil over an extended period.

—In Tehran earlier this month, Nakasone presided over the establishemnt of the Iran-Japan Petrochemical Co., half owned by Iran and half by Mitsui. It will build Iran's first petrochemical complex at Bandal Shapur Port on the Persian Gulf. The Japanese are also discussing a gas liquifaction project with Iran.

—In mid-February, Japan Line startled the oil world by agreeing to pay $2.38 per barrel for top-quality Abu Dhabi state-owned oil, considerably higher than the price western oil companies had just agreed to pay the Abu Dhabi government. In the process, Japan Line tied up 730 million barrels over eight years — most of the stateowned oil Abu Dhabi will have at its disposal for the next few years.

Japan Line sweetened the deal with a lowinterest $150 million loan to Abu Dhabi, money it is using to pay Western oil companies to buy out a 25 per cent share in their operations in the country. The loan was worth an estimated five cents more on the barrel to Abu Dhabi.

Western oil companies raised a hue and cry over the high price of the Japan Line deal. Even MITI expressed displeasure over the deal made outside its auspices. The ministry forced Japan Line to sell the new oil to Japanese refineries at a lower price.

TALKS FAIL TO HIT OIL

TRIPOLI (UPI) — Negotiations between western oil companies and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on an increase in the price of crude oil ended Wednesday in failure, an OPEC statement said.

Details of the two-day talks in this Libyan capital were not made public.

The statement said the OPEC negotiating team had called a special meeting of the 11-member organization for May 21 in Vienna to discuss the talks.

OPEC and nine western oil companies are negotiating on an increase in the price of crude oil which OPEC members said they want to compensate for the devaluation of the U.S. dollar.

While details were not disclosed, OPEC Secretary General Dr. Abdel Rahman Ksene said the most recent offer by the western oil companies was little different from those made in previous meetings.

GEORGE WESTON LIMITED

James A. Watson

George Weston Limited announces the appointment of Mr. James A. Watson to the position of Managing Director, Canadian Retail and Wholesale Operations.

Mr. Watson comes to the Weston Organization with a distinguished background of 27 years in the retail and wholesale food and general merchandise business. Most recently he was President of Gamble-Skogmo Inc. Before that he was President for nine years of Red Owl Stores, a retail, wholesale and drug operation, also headquartered in Minneapolis.

In addition to carrying out his operating responsibilities, Mr. Watson has been asked to join the board of George Weston Limited.

CLARE ANDERSON

The Red Lion is pleased to announce Clare Anderson as Executive Vice-President of Red Lion Investments Limited. He brings to the Red Lion Motor Inn 20 years of similar experience. Mr. Anderson is present owner of the "Coffee House" in Mayfair Shopping Centre and founder of the Oak Bay Marina Restaurant.

Brokerage Houses Pinched by Listless Market

By ALLAN FORREST
Business Editor

Victoria brokerage houses are beginning to feel the pinch of the stock market slump in Vancouver, Toronto and New York.

"Business is very, very slow," one brokerage house manager said.

"Not only the Vancouver mines but the big companies in Toronto and Wall Street. There is considerable concern about the situation."

Salesmen in brokerage houses work on a commission basis and a market slump is bad news.

However, the result at this stage is a little belt-tightening and fervent hopes for a recovery—there is no thought of layoffs this early in the slump.

"To keep the matter in perspective," said another manager, "business is not bad, just not as good as it was. We are concerned but not alarmed at the moment."

Every manager offers a different explanation for the lower volume of stock trading.

The most frequent explanations:

—The Vancouver mines market is reacting to uncertainty created by New Democratic Party policies on taxes and mine development.

—The federal tax on capital gains is discouraging people from selling when they have a paper profit. Investors are less eager to take profits that will be subject to taxation.

—Business is so good merchants are plowing their money back into their own firms rather than investing in the market.

—The surge in real estate prices is encouraging some investors to look more favorably at houses and apartments rather than buying stocks.

—Inflation is pushing up interest rates and money can be made with less risk in mortgages and other types of investments.

However, despit the decline in market activity, there is no evidence of eagerness to sell stock holdings. The price trend is mixed with some increases based upon glowing company profit reports.

Mainly, observers look upon the present situation as a wait-and-see market with no eagerness to buy but no inclination to sell.

In Vancouver, market observers reported that brokerage houses should not be in any severe difficulties as long as the daily volume on the Vancouver Stock Excahnge continued to average more than 2 million shares per day.

In April, the lowest point in 16 months, the daily volume averaged 2.2 million shares. It had been 2.6 million in January, 2.8 million in February and 2.5 million in March.

The Vancouver Stock Exchange itself would feel the pinch if trading fell below 2 million shares daily as its revenue is based upon the volume of shares traded.

One significant mining or oil discovery would be enough to perk up the Vancouver market observers feel, but restoring enthusiasm to the Toronto market is a more complicated problem.

All the economic factors are present for a bull market but the lack of investor enthusiasm has left all the excahnges in what is probably a brief doldrum.

Afton Dispute Settled

VANCOUVER (CP) — An agreement to settle a dispute over the Afton Mines Ltd. copper property near Kamloops was announced late Wednesday.

Teck Corp. and Iso Mines Ltd. will pay Canex Placer Ltd. $4 million to give up its interest in the property.

Court proceedings had been conducted over an agreement signed in 1972 between the directors of Afton and Canex. The agreement called for Canex to put up money for exploration and development in return for an equity interest in the property.

Teck and Iso disputed the agreement, saying they had bought control of Afton and had not approved of the deal.

Wednesday's announcement said all court actions are to be terminated.

The British Columbia Supreme Court ruled in December that Afton's directors had acted properly. Teck was appealing that decision.

Yukon Rail Shares Sell For $18

WINNIPEG (CP) — Federal Industries Ltd. of Winnipeg today announced it has purchased about 495,000 common shares of the White Pass and Yukon Corp. Ltd., for $18.00 a share.

In a news release, Federal Industries said the shares, representing approximately 26 per cent of the outstanding common shares in the White Pass and Yukon Corp. Ltd., were purchased from Anmercosa Investments Ltd.

Federal said it will make an offer to the remaining shareholders to purchase an additional 453,715 common shares, or such lesser number as may be tendered.

Should Federal Industries obtain the nearly 455,000 common shares, it would then own about 50.3 per cent of the common shares in the company.

Liberal Party Losing Ethics: Stanfield

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Wednesday night the Liberal party is causing concern by "wholesale abandonment of principles and policies that it had been espousing for more than four years."

"Since the election there has been a host of examples of newfound cynicism and reversals in policy—more than enough to raise serious questions about the consistency and credibility of the government," the Progressive Conservative leader told more than 600 persons attending a $100-a-plate political fund-raising dinner.

"Because trust and confidence in government are so basic to our democratic society, it is important that voters know what people in government believe in. It is essential the people know that their political leaders really believe what they say when they say it."

The turnout for the dinner surprised local party officials, some of whom said privately that they had expected less than 400 to attend. But the gathering gave little encouragement to Mr. Stanfield to strive to force an early election by defeating the Liberal administration in a Commons vote.

Loudest and most sustained applause during his 45-minute speech came when he remarked that "on no account will we vote contrary to our principles just to bring the government down." But there was only a smattering of applause when he added: "Nor will we vote against our principles just to keep this Parliament alive."

Mr. Stanfield indicated he doesn't think there will be a federal election this year unless the minority Liberal government "pulls the plug" itself.

SUPPORT LIMITED

Mr. Stanfield said his party will not support "across-the board distortions" proposed for the corporate tax system.

He said the party will support fast depreciation write-offs for 1973 and 1974, plus corporation tax cuts for this year only. However, there would be no Conservative support for Finance Minister John Turner's original plays to make such measures a continuing part of the tax system.

The cuts and writeoffs, contained in Mr. Turner's budget brought down a year ago, have not been voted on by Parliament. The New Democratic Party is against the corporation tax cuts in any form.

Foreclosure Charged

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A furious Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) charged in the House of Commons Tuesday that Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is foreclosing on the homes of a number of western Canadians who have fallen just two or three months behind in their mortgage payments.

Woolliams, the Progressive Conservative Housing critic, said homeowners with as much as $10,000 in equity in their homes are having to sell them to avoid losing them altogether to the government agency.

Outlining the case of one Calgary homeowner, who owed just $358 in mortgage payments, Woolliams also charged that the lawyers involved in the case were on the "selected list" of those approved by the federal government for political favors.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he would look into the "allegations" and see whether Woolliams' accusations could be answered.

That wasn't good enough for the Calgary North MP, who rose to the attack again with another question — which the prime minister did not answer.

"When the prime minister is investigating this matter would he also look into the case of certain legal firms in Canada that were appointed to do government buiness on a straight patronage basis?" he asked.

Woolliams' point about patronage jobs for legal firms follows a number of lengthy questions placed on the official House of Commons notice paper which suggest that the Liberal government keeps a special list of lawyers in each province to do federal government work.

Tom Cossitt, the former Liberal Party executive who is now an Ontario Conservative MP, has suggested that a main qualification for lawyers on the list — if it does exist — is that they have worked politically for the Liberals.

Woolliams said in the specific case of foreclosure he mentioned in the Commons Tuesday, CMHC foreclosed on the mortgage because the man owed $358 and then the lawyers demanded an additional $597 in legal costs from him.

"I ask you. How foolish can you get. A man owes $358 and so you spend $597 and make him sell his home to get three months arrears from him!"

Wildlife Bill Passes

OTTAWA (CP) — A series of wide-ranging dissertations on the loftier ethics of ecological management ended Wednesday when the Commons completed second reading of bill to give the government general authority over wildlife conservation.

The bill, which died with the last Parliament, came close to expiring again Wednesday as attendance dropped to 13 MPs, seven below the minimum for a quorum. Most, including Environment Minister Jack Davis, appeared disinterested in what their colleagues had to say.

Despite a string of speeches that began Tuesday night, second reading was virtually a rubber-stamping affair.

The proposed Canada wildlife act now goes to committee for detailed consideration. It permits Ottawa to make formal arrangements with the provinces for proper wildlife management and land conservation for wildlife.

The only member strongly opposed to the bill was Don Blenkarn (PC—Peel South) who feared it would give the minister the right to do anything he wanted.

Ian Watson (L—Laprairie) and Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) said they felt the legislation does not have enough teeth.

Watson called for a ban on imports of any parts of endangered species or any products derived from these species.

Rose deplored continued environmental pollution and scoffed claims that humans are the superior race on earth.

"Our mastering has not really been masterful," he said, because mankind despoils its environment with pollutants, and traps and overkills predators with a resulting break in the natural food chain.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said the bill attempts to deal with a problem that must be given serious attention.

He urged that native and rural people, those most familiar with wildlife, have a chance to appear before the fisheries and forestry committee and contribute invaluable testimony that might serve as a guide to the government.

Bombers Ready for Hot Summer

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The flying firemen are ready for a hot summer.

Chief pilot L. B. Pearson, of Flying Fireman Ltd. at Patricia Bay Airport, said: "Signs are it will be a bad fire season."

B.C. forests are already drying out without significant rainfall in months, and foresters anticipate the worst fire season in four years.

For its part, Flying Fireman has completed pilot training and aircraft overhauls in readiness for service anywhere in B.C. or Alberta.

An aircrew is on daily standby at Patricia Bay, where one of the company's six tanker planes is based.

Flying Fireman uses Canso amphibians, twin-engine flying boats used on wartime maritime patrols which are converted to carry tons of firefighting chemical and water-gel mixture in their bellies in place of anti-submarine bombs.

Two more tankers are based at Smithers and the remaining three are in Alberta.

Besides the water bombers themselves, the company uses light aircraft as spotters or "bird dog" planes which are leased for the role.

They usually carry forestry officers when guiding bombers to their targets over a fire. Standing by at Patricia Bay is a twin-engine Aero Commander, capable of 275 miles-an-hour passes over a blaze.

One crew for each plane and one standby crew makes a total of about 20 pilots now ready for what summer may bring.

The company may be called out by the B.C. Forest Service or by private logging, pulp and paper companies to protect forest holdings.

Aircraft will be based wherever conditions prove worst during fire season, and if the company's own resources are not enough there are arrangements to procure additional tankers from other areas, Pearson said.

Muzzle Denied By Head Office

Employees at Jordan River were not told to shut up about mine tailing pollution, a Rayonier (Canada) Ltd. official said today.

"We don't do that sort of thing," Hank Hansen of Vancouver said. "But whether pressure was exerted on the people at a local management level, I don't know."

The superintendent of Puget Sound Lumber Company, the Rayonier subsidiary at Jordan River, was not available for comment.

Hansen was commenting on a charge by Capital Regional Board Director Howard Elder that CPSLC told residents not to get involved in the controversy over Jordan River Mines Ltd. discharging mine tailings near a recreational beach.

Elder said Wednesday the people won't protest because of company pressure.

Derrick Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment (C.A.S.E.), said the apparent muzzle being placed on employees of CPSLC to squelch complaints of mine tailings polluting the beach "is an abrogation of human rights."

On the pollution issue, Mallard said he has observed the discharge from the pipe.

"Anyone who is not blind can observe discoloration of the beach for several hundred yards in addition to excessive turbidity of the water," he said.

"I suspect the shell life there is heavily contaminated," he added.

Mallard said he understands the B.C. government has air photographs which show the mine's effluent patterns along this section of the coast.

"We would like the government to release these for publication," he said. "Warning notices that the beach is contaminated should also be erected."

The Pollution Control Branch is investigating.

NAMED judge of provincial court in Kamloops by the provincial cabinet is John Macintyre, 48. Macintyre joined Victoria court as prosecutor in 1966.

Anderson Affair Soothed

Things have been smoothed over between the inter municipal magistrates' court committee and senior city prosecutor Wallace Anderson, according to Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

News reports early this week quoted Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, a member of the court committee, accusing Pollen of wanting to fire Anderson as soon as possible.

Curtis boycotted a meeting of the court committee Wednesday after saying he wanted nothing to do with Pollen's firing plans.

Pollen said in an interview after the closed committee meeting that Anderson had been interviewed and matters of personnel in the prosecutors' office had been discussed.

Members of the committee also apologized to Anderson for the discussion of personnel matters in the news media, Pollen said. The mayor reiterated his concern over Mayor Curtis' disclosure of personnel issues.

John Macintyre, senior prosecutor in the city department, which handles cases for all four inner municipalities, is going to Kamloops as a provincial court judge and the staff situation is under review by the court committee which meets only sporadically.

Earlier this week Victoria city council passed a vote of confidence in the chief city planning officer and the traffic engineer, both of whom had been named as possible victims of a rumored purge of city hall staff. Anderson was not named in the vote of confidence.

Mine Permit Extension Granted

Jordan River Mines Ltd. has been granted a three-year reclamation permit to continue working on its Vancouver Island copper mining operation.

A mining company must have a reclamation permit before it can proceed with ore removal.

The company posts a bond, guaranteeing to restore the property as it proceeds. The land is to be restored to a standard set by the provincial reclamation committee, a inter-departmental group established by the provincial government.

The company must apply to renew the permit after three years.

Optometrists Eye UVic For Training Centre

University of Victoria is the site preferred by the Canadian Association of Optometrists for a school of optometry in Western Canada, UVic president Dr. Hugh Farquhar said Wednesday.

The association and various governments are considering starting such a school to relieve a shortage of optometrists in Canada, Farquhar told the senate at its monthly meeting in the Cornett Building.

He said he believed that governments of the western provinces have already agreed to establish a school of optometry.

"According to my report, Victoria is the preferred site," Farquhar said.

He suggested that senate show some interest in UVic having the school or the governments will "look elsewhere" for a site.

Senate unanimously passed a motion to look into the possibility of a school of optometry here.

Capital costs of the school would be paid by the federal government, operating costs by the provincial government, Farquhar said.

Senate also approved in principle creation of an experimental environmental studies program, consisting mainly of courses already offered at the university.

However, the specific program outlined by a senate ad hoc committee in its report has run into opposition from some faculty members, so chances of the program starting this fall are slim.

Senate asked the ad hoc committee to look at the program again and try to meet various faculty objections.

Dr. Robert Reid, speaking for the committee, pointed out that "departmental jealousies" are the reason no such environmental program has been established at Simon Fraser University or University of British Columbia.

Senate member Barbara Corry expressed concern about delays in starting the program, when similar programs are under way all over the continent.

"We are foolish if we don't stipulate some effort to get the first year of this program under way this fall," she said.

In other business, senate approved changes in the university library's book loan policy which will put students and faculty on an equal footing for the first time.

Loan period for students and faculty is now up to four months. Previously a faculty member could take a book out for a year, an undergraduate for two weeks and a graduate student for a month.

Faculty and students will be subject to a $1 per day fine for each overdue book. At present faculty members are not fined for overdue books.

Senate also agreed to reduce the normal admittance age for mature students from 24 to 21.

Gordon to Head Math Dept.

Dr. William Gordon, 38, associate professor of mathematics at the University of Victoria, will become head of the mathematics department July 1.

He replaces Phoebe Noble, acting head of the department since 1971 and a faculty member of UVic and Victoria College for over 25 years, who is going on study leave next year.

Gordon is stepping down as associate dean of arts and science, a position he had held since last July. He came to UVic in 1965 and was made assistant dean of arts and science in 1969.

FORD OFFERS UVIC 'INNOVATIVE' FUND

Ford Motor Company will pay for some innovative program at the University of Victoria if UVic can come up with one.

Ford's offer was announced to UVic senate Wednesday by president Dr. Hugh Farquhar.

He invited senate members to submit briefs on new and different programs that might appeal to Ford.

Pressed for a figure on the size of Ford's grant, Farquhar answered: "I would hate to suggest a figure, but if I did it would be a big round one with lots of zeros."

"I've tried them out on environmental studies," said Farquhar, but everybody's doing environmental studies these days.

"No wonder they're not interested in environmental studies," quipped Dr. Izzud-Din Pal.

Gun Curbs Wanted, But Not U.K. Law

RCMP Assistant Commissioner Gordon Cunningham favors strict gun laws but doesn't think legislation being considered by the British government would be acceptable to Canadians.

The British government has proposed banning toy guns which look too much like the real ones, and wants to prevent gun collecting as a hobby.

"We need stricter laws," he said. "There are just too many weapons abroad in our society."

He disclosed that in a period of 13 months, 67 persons were found with weapons in their possession.

"This is too heavy an incidence to overlook," he stated. "We are apprehensive."

Cunningham didn't know why Britain, which has always had stricter gun laws than Canada and the United States, is considering tougher controls.

"But it is interesting to note that the London Metropolitan Police Force, which carries no guns, is now having difficulty enlisting recruits," he said.

"Britain has a much tighter social order than the U.S. or Canada," he added. "It is my guess they are thinking of the future. They are taking preventive measures — not waiting for conditions to deteriorate.

"But here in British Columbia there is nothing to prevent a man with the money from buying every gun in a sporting goods shop," he said.

HAFER MACHINISTS SETTLE STRIKE

Fifteen employees of Hafer Machine Company Limited, 1720 Store, returned to work today after negotiations Wednesday ended a three-day strike.

Agreement was reached between the company and Local 456 of the International Association of Machinists on a new two-year contract providing a pay raise of $1.15 an hour, in two stages, and improvements in the health and welfare plan and annual vacations, said union business agent Hugh Weydert.

Hourly wage before the settlement was $5.10, he added.

Addict's Wish: Jail

A 25-year-old man who asked for a two-year sentence in B.C. Penitentiary to cure his heroin addiction got his wish today.

"Not everyone has your courage," Judge William Ostler told Robert James McRae, of no fixed address.

The man had requested a lengthy sentence in the penitentiary, where he could get psychiatric advice to break the heroin habit.

McRae was sentenced Wednesday to six months after pleading guilty to a heroin possession charge. He had been picked up by police Wednesday morning.

Today, the man pleaded guilty to a March 8 heroin possession charge arising from a drug squad raid on a Pandora apartment. During a struggle with officers a balloon containing 17 capsules of heroin was forced from the man's mouth.

McRae, living on $300 a month unemployment insurance money, had $420 in bills of various denominations at the time of his arrest, said Prosecutor Mike Hutchison.

"I wish you luck," was the judge's final comment.

Why Irish Fans Are Smiling

Lacrosse: Shamrocks Come 'Skip'-ing Home

Skip Chapman is the daddy of the Shamrocks this season, and already he has taken charge.

This was opening night in the Western Lacrosse Association at Memorial Arena and if it hadn't been for "good, old Skip," as one player said, it might not have been the success it turned out to be.

The Shamrocks came up smiling in a 15-12 victory over Coquitlam Adanacs; and if it wasn't necessarily an artistic presentation, they'll take the two points and thank the Adanacs for not bringing over some of their high-priced help, thank you.

Jim Grady and Gaylord Powless didn't show, for whatever reason, and if that tarnished the league image in the eyes of the fans there was a reason. The miscreants had missed practice Monday night and been suspended.

Perhaps it was just as well for the Irish; because in the final accounting it was their conditioning that told as they roared from behind a two-goal deficit in the final period to win going away.

And going the fastest of all the Shamrocks were the two big siege guns from last year, the Thompsons. Ivan, the WLA's most valuable player last season, started off right where he had ended up. He had four goals and two assists. Brother Brian had three goals and two assists.

The One Without the 'p'

Ivan later agreed he could have had a hatful, he had so many fine chances. But that was mostly late in the game. In the early going the Rocks were tense, nervous and positively shaky. They had to find themselves—"game conditions are just a little different from workouts," said coach Ed Kowalyk. And quite frankly, if the Adanacs had been a trifle sharper, the Rocks were ripe to be had, especially early.

There were a couple of pleasant surprises. One was big Dave Thomson (the one without the "p"). He handled himself extremely well and undoubtedly will make his presence felt more in the future. Roger Dubyna, the ex-junior, appeared to be a cool customer. So did Chris Hall.

And therein is another strange tale. It was Hall's first senior lacrosse game ever and his first game since midget days.

In the in-between years he had enjoyed outstanding success in basketball, football and baseball. On Wednesday he took his regular shift, showed well on defence, and got involved enough offensively to pick up three assists.

Not bad for a beginning, even if he did feel lost a few times. "Yes, it was strange," he admitted.

The 'Eyes' Have It Now

Still, if this wasn't one of Chapman's finest two hours, it will do until the next game. He certainly kept the Irish close when they were showing green around the edges in that first period; and he was just as proficient later as the Rocks several times got mixed up in their defensive assignments, got badly trapped and got burned by Adanac fast breaks.

As it was the Adanacs scored three goals while playing shorthanded, and if that should never happen, Chapman was the fellow who made certain they didn't get any more.

Skip's secret? Well, he's taken up a new game—squash racquets. The original intention was that it might help to keep him in shape during the winter months. That was when he wasn't riding his bicycle, of course. And Skip is the first to admit he needed the work. As a chubby individual to begin with, obviously he took a ribbing.

But all jokes are off now. For as Skip readily admitted after the game, "You know I think the squash helped. Following the smaller ball has done wonders for my eyesight. I can see the ball better out there than I could last year."

With that the Adanacs undoubtedly will agree.

'SKIP' CHAPMAN
. . . squash helped

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Bill Bradley benched two of his three "super stars" Wednesday night and, when the shouting had died down, the Coquitlam coach must have wondered a little about his decision.

The shouting, by 2,589 jubilant fans at Memorial Arena, honored a fine 15-12 win for Victoria' Shamrocks over Bradley's Adanacs.

The crowd was one of the biggest in recent years for a Western Lacrosse Association opening game here, surpassing by almost 1,000 fans the number of 1,681 who watched Victoria beat Coquitlam 13-9 in last season's opener.

Playing-coach Bradley, who returned to the WLA after a year with Windsor Warlocks, took disciplinary action against Gaylord Powless and Jim Grady, both of whom failed to turn up for training Monday.

Powless, formerly with Brantford Warriors, is regarded by many as one of the best lacrosse players in Canada and Grady, from Peterborough Lakers, has been one of the top scorers in Ontario for the last three years.

Both had been expected to give Adanacs a much-needed boost in the scoring department. In the dressing room afterwards, Bradley pondered his decision to leave them out of the first game.

"We have to do this," he said, almost as though he were trying to convince himself. "We are a disciplined club and even the super stars must behave.

"We could have done with them tonight, of course," he admitted with a wry smile. Then he hastily added: "But then, we could have won without them, too — we just weren't there."

Bradley gave full credit to the Shamrocks, saying they were fit and fast and fully deserved their win.

Jubilant Shamrock coach Ed Kowalyk said the first game turned out just as he had expected. His "guys" were nervous, made a lot of mistakes but came through in the end.

And that's just about the way it was.

Shaky at the start, Shamrocks recovered their composure to snatch a 2-0 lead only to see Adanacs capitalize on a lack of hustle by the defence to score at 19 minutes and 43 seconds and take a 5-4 margin at the end of the first period.

Then, after another good recovery early in the second period, Shamrocks came close to throwing it away with some half-hearted play by the defence late in the second and early in the third periods.

Just as they had done in the first period, Adanacs scored in the dying seconds when John Allan, a 100-point scorer last season, got his third goal at 19:48.

That made it 9-8 and, when Coquitlam boosted this to 10-8 at the start of the third period, things looked bad for the Shamrocks.

But Ivan Thompson, the Rocks' scoring star last season, fired in his fourth goal to start a spree which saw Victoria score four unanswered goals in less than three minutes to sweep from 11-12 to 15-12.

It was Ivan and brother Brian who pulled the Shamrocks out of trouble in the second period when they scored three goals between them in a 40-second burst.

Newcomers Ron Kulcheski and the cool Roger Dubyna had impressive first games and goalkeeper Skip Chapman was brilliant, making 35 saves and surviving under extreme early pressure to keep Victoria in the game.

Brady used his third highly-touted import from the East — Dan Piotrowski from Windsor — but he had only one assist and spent 26 minutes in the penalty box.

Brian Thompson scored three goals and the other Shamrock scorers were Dave Thomson, Bob Turkington, Tom Levasseur, Charn Dhillon, Tom Somner, Mike Beaulac, Frank Alexander and Kulcheski.

Apart from Allan's three goals, Coquitlam got two goals each from Art Talson, Jim Aitchison and Bradley while Art Dicksinson, Dan Foster and Jim Rickbiel scored one goal each.

Now Shamrocks must avoid a repeat of what happened last season when they travel to Coquitlam to play the Adanacs again Saturday night. After taking the opener last year, the Rocks were edged 10-9 by Coquitlam in the second game.

Next Tuesday, the Shamrocks play Burrards in Vancouver and their next home game is against New Westminster Salmonbellies, champions last season, on Wednesday, May 23.

Terriers Win Short Game

BRANDON (CP) — Portage Terriers defeated Pembroke Lumber Kings, 3-1, Wednesday in a game that ended in a dispute over a penalty call at 14:53 of the third period.

Portage now leads the best-of-seven Centennial Cup junior hockey final, 3-0. Fourth game in the series is scheduled for Sunday night in Winnipeg.

Randy Hextall, Randy Penner and Grant Farncombe shared the Terriers' scoring, with Pat Hahn getting the lone Pembroke goal early in the game.

The beginning of the end came when Pembroke's Murray Thrasher was sent off at 14:46 for elbowing. Marty Cannon then received a misconduct from referee Bill Chapple of Brandon for arguing the penalty to Thrasher.

After a delay of nearly five minutes, most of which was spent with Pembroke players off the ice, Chapple dropped the puck to resume play. Lumber King coach Mac MacLean threw a stick over the boards and instructed his team to return to the ice and they were promptly called for too many men and given a bench penalty.

After a further delay of nearly 15 minutes, Chapple awarded the game to Portage.

MacLean leaped over the boards and made straight for the referee, who skated to the penalty box accompanied by the linesman.

MacLean was met at the penalty box by policemen and finally the ice was cleared without further incident.

Immediately following the game's premature ending, MacLean said he would file an official protest with Frank German, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's series convenor.

Jayhawks Nip Burnaby

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coquitlam J-Hawks downed Burnaby, 11-9, in the Pacific Junior Lacrosse Wednesday night, with Gilles Dzeau's three goals proving the big factor.

George Masseau had two goals for Coquitlam, with Mike Holden getting four goals and Dave Matheson three for Burnaby. Darryl Sauve stopped 31 shots for Coquitlam, while Ted Gurney blocked 37 for Burnaby.

Orillia in Front

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Orillia Terriers ralled for four consecutive goals in the third period to down St. Boniface Mohawks, 8-5, Wednesday night in the third game of the best-of-seven Allan Cup senior hockey final.

The victory gave Orillia a 2-1 lead in the series, which continues here Friday.

Garrie Vaughan scored two goals and assisted on another for Orillia, which had to come from behind five times.

Orillia had a 62-36 advantage in shots.

Customs Call 'Time Out' To Gawk at Stanley Cup

CHICAGO (CP) — Nothing seems to be going according to form in the current Stanley Cup final playoff and the return of the Cup itself to Chicago Wednesday night was no exception.

The famed mug, emblematic of National Hockey League supremacy since 1923, made its first-ever air crossing of an international boundary Wednesday but security precautions broke down—like the Montreal and Chicago defences in the fifth game of the current series.

Chicago Black Hawks won that fifth game 8-7, crushing earlier predictions for a goaltenders' series and forcing the best-of-seven series to move back here for a sixth game tonight. The Cup was brought from Montreal by air, ready for presentation to the Canadiens should they clinch the series.

The Cup has made the trip numerous times by road and train, but Maurice (Lefty) Reid, curator of the Hockey Hall of Fame in Toronto, said this is the first time to his knowledge it had been flown across an international border. border.

But despite security arrangements to hustle the priceless silver trophy through customs here, official business in the crowded customs hall all but ceased as agents hurried to a remote area of the terminal building to get a glimpse of the oldest trophy competed for by professional athletes in North America.

Reid, whose custom it has been to ferry the trophy between Montreal and Chicago by car during the current final series, was accompanied by Irwin Blehm of Toronto, the NHL's assistant security director when he flew the championship trophy here.

"We'd list it under TIB, which means temporary importation," said Bob Fitzgerald, one of two airport security guards who kept vigil on the trophy from the moment it left the cargo hold of the Air Canada DC-9 until it was turned over to Dave Will, a Chicago investigator. "What it means is that the article will be taken back out in a few days."

The Hawks, meanwhile, returned to the stadium following their win at Montreal Tuesday night, a game in which defences of both clubs seemed to be out to lunch for almost 60 minutes.

"Never seen anything like it, probably never will again," remarked Pat Stapleton, who added: "I know I was perfect. I was on for every one of Montreal's goals."

Ex-Canadien Ralph Backstrom doesn't have any illusions about how the Montrealers will react.

"You can't expect another one like Tuesday," the Hawks centre said. "But I think the win did us a lot more good than the other one (7-4 here a week ago).

"In that one we went ahead 5-0 and were hanging on at the end. And it has to make us feel good to know we can score eight times on (Ken) Dryden."

The one person around the rink in apparent sympathy with the Montreal goaltender was his Chicago counterpart, Tony Esposito.

"The puck just seemed to be going in, crazy bounces, everything," Esposito recalled.

Tonight's game starts at 5 p.m. PDT.

Bicycle Contests Set for Students

Boys and girls in the Greater Victoria and Sooke areas have a chance to gain a new experience, get some exercise and earn laurels by competing in the inaugural Victoria school bicycle racing championships starting Sunday.

Sponsored by the Victoria Wheelers, the event is open to students in grades eight to 10 at both public and private schools within school districts 61, 62, 63 and 64.

Heats will be held Sunday and May 27 over a 12-mile course at Centennial Park in Saanich.

The top 25 per cent of finishers in each heat advance to the final, a 17-mile test over Latoria and Happy Valley roads in Metchosin, on June 3.

The first heat is limited to students in school district 61 while the second will be open to competitors from the other three areas.

Each race starts at 10 a.m. and registrations can be made right at the starting line after 9:30 a.m.

Medals will be awarded to the top three finishers in the final and the school represented by the winning student will receive a trophy.

Swords Pad Playoff Lead

HALIFAX (CP) — Cincinnati Swords scored a goal in each period Wednesday night to defeat Nova Scotia Voyageurs, 3-0, and take a 3-0 lead in games in their best-of-seven American Hockey League final.

Rick Dudley, Steve Richardson and Jake Rathwell scored for the Swords, who could wrap the series up Friday night when it resumes at the Forum.

Gary Bromley picked up the shutout for the Swords, facing only 21 shots from the Voyageurs.

City Golfers Earn Honors

DUNCAN — Victoria golfers captured a major share of the silverware in the seventh annual Ladies' Field Day at Cowichan Golf and Country Club last weekend.

Diane Phillips of Uplands won the Wright Trophy for low gross and Flora Clark of Gorge Vale collected the Milady's Fashion Trophy for winning the low net competition.

Margaret Fry, Helen Wilson, Doris Smith and Mary Wakelin of Gorge won the B.C. Forest Products Trophy in the team event.

COWICHAN CHARTER MAY HAVE A PROBLEM

Sunday's playoff for the CFAX-Vancouver Island Open golf championship is an all-Cowichan affair, so the special cheering section may have a problem picking a favorite.

The 36-hole final between professional Bill Wakeham and amateur Al MacLeod is drumming up extra hometown support. Cowichan Club members are chartering at least one bus for the match at Glen Meadows Golf Club.

The championship match will get under way with rounds at 9:15 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. Preceeding Wakeham and MacLeod, at 9 and 1, will be handicap finalists Les Atchison of Cowichan and Gorge Vale's Art Binks. For that one, Cowichan's favorite will be obvious.

Unearned Tally Sinks Six-Mile

Mike's Sport Shop stepped to the head of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League on Wednesday by defeating Six Mile House 1-0 on an unearned run at Central Park.

In the other league encounter, Century Inn bumped Sooke Merchants 7-5 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Ron Grant, who drew a base-on-balls to lead off the first inning for Mike's, gained second base on an outfield fly, stole third and came home on a throwing error by third baseman Jim Sharpe.

In the other game, Terry Oscarson helped Century with a two-run homer in the third inning, but it was the relief pitching of Jim Fatterly that preserved the victory.

Fatterly came on in the fifth and squelched a Sooke rally by blanking opponents the remainder of the way.

BILL STEEN
. . . in 20th season

Speedway Honors Bill Steen

It seems appropriate that Jim Steen is to be honored Saturday at Western Speedway.

Car-racing action that night will feature the 7th annual Billy Foster 100 for super-stocks — and Steen happens to be a cousin of the late Foster, who put Victoria on the auto racing map with appearances in the 1965 and '66 Indianapolis 500 before suffering a fatal accident at Riverside in 1967.

This year marks the 20th season of competition at Western for the 35-year-old Steen, who started racing with Foster at the old Shearing Speedway in Cobble Hill in 1953, one year before the Langford oval was built.

Steen drove stock cars in the 50s, switched to jalopies in the 60s and for the past few seasons has been behind the wheel of a super-stock.

8. Jerry Ferrie, 66 Comet	114
9. Ross McIntyre, 68 Plymouth	104
10. Jim Caudwell, 64 Comet	95

"Gentleman" Jim, the longest regular competitor at Western, campaigns in a newly-built '67 Ford this season.

Other super-stock drivers battling for the trophy include current points leader Roy Haslam and runner-up Terry Forsyth. Haslam won the inaugural running of the 100-lap event in 1967 and the other four winners were Gary Kershaw, John Currier, Larry Walker and Rick O'Dell. The race was rained out last year.

Only Kershaw and Walker will not be back in the running Saturday.

Since the main event for super-stocks is over 50 laps, drivers will also be competing for double points.

The program, which includes stock car racing, begins with time trials at 7.

Bench Ties Mark: 4-for-4 in Homers

By The Associated Press

Johnny Bench had seven runs batted in and matched the major-league baseball record for consecutive home runs Wednesday night but Cincinnati Reds still needed some extra hitting to overcome Philadelphia Phillies.

After Bench's seven RBIs, on three home runs, Dave Concepcion hit a two-run, tie-breaking homer in the ninth to give the Reds a 9-7 National League victory.

Bench's three homers, coming after one he hit on his last at-bat in Tuesday's game, allowed him to tie the record of four consecutive homers.

Elsewhere in the National League, Houston Astros' scheduled encounter with the Expos in Montreal was rained out while St. Louis Cardinals defeated San Francisco Giants 3-1, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Pittsburgh Pirates 8-5, Chicago Cubs defeated San Diego Padres 9-2 and New York Mets beat Atlanta Braves 8-1.

CARLTON TWICE

It was the second three-homer, seven-RBI game in Bench's career. The other time came on July 26, 1970 against St. Louis and pitcher Steve Carlton, then with the Cardinals, was the victim. Carlton was the victim again Wednesday.

"I got him good tonight," said Bench, who homered to centre field with a man aboard in the first inning, walked in the third, hit a three-run homer to right field in the fifth and a two-run shot to left in the seventh.

"But he's got me easy a lot of days. He's a good pitcher. They don't have to worry about him. Remember, he's under a lot of pressure to have another good year."

Although he wasn't charged with the defeat, Carlton, 4-4, saw his earned-run average climb to 3.77. He posted 27-10, 1.98 figures a year ago.

After becoming the 18th player in major league history to homer four times in a row — Pittsburgh's Ralph Kiner did it twice—Bench grounded out in the ninth inning after Pete Rose rapped his fourth single of the game before Concepcion hit his fifth home run of the season.

The big night raised Bench's batting average to .252" and gave him nine homers and 26 runs batted in.

Rookie Ken Reitz hit his first major league home run as St. Louis beat San Francisco.

Reitz hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning to give the Cards a 3-0 lead and Reggie Cleveland pitched shutout ball until the ninth, when singles by Gary Thomasson, Jim Howarth and Dave Rader accounted for the Giants' run.

Rick Monday hit a three-run homer and Billy Williams and Randy Hundley slammed two-run shots to power the Cubs over San Diego and into first place in the NL East by one game over Pittsburgh. Burt Hooton scattered six San Diego hits, including a home run by Fred Hilton.

In the American League, Cleveland Indians defeated California Angels 10-3, Oakland A's nipped Baltimore Orioles 4-3 in 10 innings, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Texas Rangers 5-1, New York Yankees blanked Minnesota Twins 2-0, and Detroit Tigers stopped Kansas City Royals 4-1.

The game in Kansas City was marred by an incident in the seventh inning. In apparent retaliation for a close pitch Lou Piniella's bat flew out of his hands and sailed toward Jim Perry on the mound. Players from both teams spilled onto the field before order was restored by the umpires.

CAMERAMEN BARRED FROM CELEBRATIONS

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Monday that cameramen will not be permitted inside the winners' dressing room at the conclusion of the Stanley Cup finals.

Campbell said in an interview that scenes from the victors' dressing room did little more than "glorify alcohol, the No. one poison in the country.

"As long as I'm president, I'm not going to condone anything that downgrades the image of hockey and we've always had a bad result with this kind of thing.

"It's a cheap, cheap show. Celebrations of this kind have no place in hockey.

"Supposed to be fun? What the heck is fun?"

Inter-House Triple For Nancy Robertson

Nancy Robertson, competing in the midget division, emerged as the only triple winner Wednesday in the annual inter-house track and field meet at Arbutus Junior High School.

Miss Robertson won the discus event as well as the 100 and 200-metre sprints.

Strathcona House was first with 202 points. Chatham was runner-up with 175, Skeena followed with 173 and Cascade finished fourth with 149.

Double winners in the individual events were: Diana Rose (junior 200 metres, high jump), Mark Lum (midget 100, 200-metres), Lee Aitchison (midget triple, long jumps), Jim Gardner (junior 200 metres, hurdles), Tom Griffin (junior 800, 1,500 metres), Steve Pennock (junior discus, long jump), Kevin Kendall (midget 800, 1,500 metres) and Mark Salter (midget 400 metres, shot put).

FRACTURE FOR FELLED MET HURLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Jon Matlack suffered a hairline fracture on the left side of his forehead Tuesday night when he was struck by a line drive, New York Mets announced Wednesday.

Matlack, last year's National League rookie of the year, was felled when hit by a shot off the bat of Atlanta Braves, shortstop Marty Perez. He was resting comfortably and was alert in hospital Wednesday.

Nordal, Jones Spank Homers

Bob Nordal hammered out a two-run homer Wednesday to lead Dicker-Martens to an 11-3 decision over London Boxing Club in a Commercial Softball League game at Macdonald Park.

In the other game, Richie Jones tagged a two-run homer to boost Action Transfer to a 7-2 win over Royal Trust.

Most of Indy Racing Cars Powered by Tiny Engines

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sixty-one of the 83 cars entered in this year's Indianapolis 500-mile race are powered by tiny four-cylinder engines smaller than the power plants in many compact passenger cars.

But these sophisticated Offenhauser engines have been refined in the laboratory of auto racing.

Herb Porter, an engineering consultant for Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., says the Offy engine is the most powerful, inch-for-inch, in history. Porter conducts the company's tire and engine testing on a fulltime basis.

But Porter, sometimes referred to as the father of the modern Offenhauser engine, notes the basic engine is not all that powerful.

In a 1,500-pound race car, the four-cylinder, 160-cubic-inch engine could only manage about 125 miles an hour, Porter said. Horsepower would be near 200.

But throw on a supercharger and a fuel injection system, and instantly you have about 800 horsepower and the potential to register a 200-mile-an-hour lap, he said.

Swede Savage, running with one of Porter's engines, has turned in a 197.802 lap, the fastest so far this month at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Savage recorded a 192.5 lap in practice Wednesday for the May 28 race.

"We get about five horsepower per cubic inch," Porter said. "If you got that kind of horsepower out of your average passenger car with a 327 cubic inch engine, you would have about 1,600 horsepower. We get more horsepower per cubic inch now than any other car in the history of the world.

"While we could still get a lot more power, it would be a less reliable engine. More power is available for this year's race than last year's with a greater degree of reliability."

Winning at Indianapolis, he said, depends on the combination of "the power you can get, the power you can use and stay together" and the ability to complete the race on the amount of fuel allotted.

Another Driver Tops 190

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Carruthers became the 10th driver to exceed 190 miles an hour as the countdown began Wednesday for qualifying runs for the Indianapolis 500 mile race.

Carruthers recorded an unofficial 190.6 m.p.h. in a turbocharged Eagle-Offenhauser supervised by veteran chief mechanic Clint Brawner.

"That's the fastest I have ever run in a race car," he said.

"If I could qualify that fast, I'd make the field easily. But I want to do better."

Carruthers joined the likes of Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner, and Mark Donohue, who won last year, in what until now has been a fairly exclusive club.

Andretti was among the day's early top runners. By mid-afternoon he had boosted his Parnelli-Offy to 192.925 m.p.h.

Swede Savage boasted a lap at 192.5 during the morning.

Gary Bettenhausen, who claimed the lion's share of last year's lap money got on the board with 191.4.

"Somebody is going to cut one at 200 m.p.h.," Carruthers predicted. "I'll guarantee that Bobby Unser's pole speed of last year will be broken—by several drivers."

Unswer, who won the 1968 Indianapolis race, qualified last year at a speed of 195.940 m.p.h. His third-lap speed of 196.678 already has been exceeded in practice by Savage.

Lineups at City Courts Stress Need for Centre

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

Makes sense, that idea of John Nichol's for a tennis centre.

Nichol, a keen competitor and long-time tournament organizer, would like to see a multi-court complex similar to the popular one in Vancouver's Stanley Park built here. And he has so informed Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

In his letter to Curtis, Nichol has pointed out that there are now plenty of "neighborhood" courts and has urged Saanich Council to consider constructing a complex with possibly 12 courts now, and maybe up to 20 later on.

Such a complex could be a sort of focal point for tennis on Vancouver Island and is badly needed.

From a competetive point of view, or course, such a centre would provide an ideal place to stage all tournaments.

★ ★ ★

When Nichol gets the Victoria section of the B.C. Festival of Sports tournament under way this weekend, it will be at four locations — the Racquet Club, University of Victoria, Royal Oak and Carnarvon Park. The organizing headaches are many and obvious.

As well, a multi-court setup would take a great deal of pressure off the existing 40-odd public courts in the Greater Victoria area and provide and ideal place for both junior and adult instruction.

Veteran instructors Howard Tooby of Oak Bay and Gordan Hartley, who teaches for the Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt municipalities, are backing Nichol to the hilt.

The move for a centre comes at a time when Victoria is feeling the full force of a tennis tidal wave of popularity currently swamping North America.

Present facilities here just can't cope with this wave.

Oak Bay Tennis Club, which has just three doubles courts and one singles court, has increased its maximum membership from 100 to 120 this season. Still there is a long waiting list.

About 250 play tennis at the Racquet Club, a big increase over previous years, and even with nine courts tennis committee chairman John Fairweather says they are so busy a booking system is necessary.

Every day, there are lineups at the parks throughout Greater Victoria with players and would-be players waiting not only to use the courts but even the practice board.

When Hartley began his adult instruction program, designed he says not to turn out tennis stars but to make new players "feel comfortable" on a court, at Beacon Hill Park in the late 1950s, there were about 50 students.

This has not grown steadily but suddenly exploded so that classes have just started now with 10 times that number — almost 500 in the adult groups in Victoria, Saanich and Esquimalt, more than half of them in Saanich.

Limits have to be set on classes and Hartley now has three assistant coaches working every day of the week with him.

Tournament dates for the season have now been set but there may have to be some changes as there are a couple of bad clashes.

Oak Bay Club championships are set for June 9-16 and the provincial finals of the Festival of Sports tourney, which often involve several Oak Bay players are on at Tsawwassen June 9-11.

As well, the popular "Old Crocks" tourney at the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club is scheduled for July 13-15 and the Victoria City Open is set for July 14 to 21 at the Racquet Club.

Other dates are Racquet Club championships, June 16 to 23; Racquet Club junior tourney, June 27-30; 76th annual B.C. Open tourney at Racquet Club, Aug. 6-11 and in conjunction Pacific Northwest Senior championships, Aug. 8-11; 85th annual Vancouver Island championships, at Cowichan, Aug. 13-18; Racquet Club handicap tourney, Aug. 18-26.

FINAL THOUGHT: It may be Mothers' Day and I may be a male tennis chauvinist, but I wouldn't bet too much against Bobby Riggs in his big match with Margaret Court Sunday.

STEWARDS PROBING FINAL RACE ON CARD

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — An official investigation is under way for the third consecutive year into circumstances concerning the 10th and final race at Churchill Downs on the day of the Kentucky Derby. The Courier-Journal reported Wednesday.

In a copyright story, the newspaper said steward Art Hebel of the Kentucky State racing commission noted a dramatic "reversal of form" on the part of Fear A Bit, the winner in Saturday's 10th race.

The Courier-Journal quoted Hebel as saying he began a "preliminary investigation" and interviewed Vic Karr, trainer of the horse, and jockey Earlie Fires Tuesday.

Hebel said Karr was to appear at a private hearing today.

The six-year-old gelding entered the 10th race, which followed the Kentucky Derby Saturday, after running out of the money in six starts this year. The gelding is owned by Karr's wife, Irene D. Karr.

FIELDS UNAVAILABLE IF CAROLYN'S BARRED

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — If Carolyn King can't play baseball with the boys this season, none of the Ypsilanti Little League teams will be permitted to use the city's diamonds, city council has ruled.

The ruling cancelled two games which had been scheduled Wednesday at city-owned sites.

Council's action came after Carolyn was ousted from the local Little League roster because of a rule barring girls.

The national Little League headquarters in Williamsport, Pa., threatened to revoke the local chapter's charter if it went ahead with plans to play Carolyn.

When informed of the action, Robert Taylor, vice-president of the Ypsilanti Little League, expressed surprise but added that it might be what is needed "to force the issue."

"With discrimination being the issue, the city has every right to ban us from playing on its fields," Taylor said.

Lengthy Layoff United's Worry

Both Victoria West-United and Victoria Gorge Molsons are reported fit and at full strength for Sunday's big game at Royal Athletic Park.

But a four-week layoff could hamper the United players when they take on the fit young Gorge side in the Pacific Coast Soccer League sudden-death semi-final playoff game at 6:45 p.m.

United hasn't had a game since Saturday, April 14, when the club edged University of British Columbia Thunderbirds 2-1 in its final league match in Vancouver. And the club last played a home game a week before that when it blanked North Shore United 4-0.

Gorge, however, involved in later Coast League games and the Province Cup competition, has seen a lot of action lately.

Only last Saturday, the club played confidently to blank Thunderbirds 2-0 at Royal Athletic Park in a special playoff game to decide third place in the league.

Fans can expect another close, exciting game between the two Victoria clubs and no doubt they will be keen to get a second look at Gorge's new find, centre-forward Ken Paton.

Paton, an experienced amateur player from Glasgow, impressed the crowd last weekend when setting up both goals in his debut here.

Leeds Regains Form To Batter Arsenal

LONDON (CP) — Leeds United, surprisingly beaten by Second Division Sunderland in the English Football Association Cup final last Saturday, bounced back by crushing Arsenal, 6-1, in the last English First Division match of the season Wednesday.

Arsenal, runners-up to Liverpool in the First Division, were pulverized by Leeds' winger Peter Lorimer, who scored three goals. Joe Jordan with two and Billy Bremner scored Leeds' other goals. George Armstrong scored for Arsenal.

Leeds, third in the table behind Liverpool and Arsenal, showed it had recaptured its best form in time for the European Cup Winners Cup final against Italy's A. C. Milan in Salonika, Greece, on May 16.

Sunderland, still in a dream after its sensational Cup triumph, was brought back to reality, losing 3-0 at home to Queen's Park Rangers, one of the two teams promoted to the First Division.

In another second-division game, Hull topped Cardiff, 2-0.

Angle Light Out

BALTIMORE (AP) — Angle Light, the winner of the Wood Memorial, has been withdrawn from the Preakness as Secretariat and Sham, the 1-2 finishers in the Kentucky Derby, tested the Pimlico track for the first time.

WIN BY RUSSIANS ENDS HOOP SERIES

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Soviet Union defeated the United States, 72-64, Wednesday night in the final game of their six-game exhbition basketball series.

The United States won four of the six games in the American tour.

Six Soviets fouled out of the game, but the visitors repeatedly stopped the Americans far out from the basket and prevented the open shots.

Under international rules, no free throws are attempted unless a player is fouled while shooting.

The Soviets jumped in fron by 16-7 in the first seven minutes, led by as many as 10 points in the first half, and were ahead at halftime 40-36.

Bond to Back Gravel Pit Plan

An "adequate performance bond" should be put up by Construction Aggregates Limited and its parent companies to ensure compliance with recommendations governing a huge housing project expected in 20 years at its Colwood sand and gravel pit, Capital Regional District directors agreed Wednesday.

The directors endorsed a recommendation from the regional planning committee that the district advise the provincial government's environment and land-use committee it endorses the company's proposal for more intensive gravel extraction, provided the company and its parent companies enter into an agreement to:

—Dedicate at the completion of extraction operations a road right-of-way 132 feet wide as an extension of Ocean Boulevard;

—Maintain public access along the waterfront for the entire length of the property at all times;

—Provide a two-acre parcel of waterfront land at the northeast corner of the property for development by the regional district as a park site for immediate use;

—Dedicate for public use, at the completion of extraction operations, a strip of land 100 feet wide, measured from the present high water mark, extending over the entire length of the property;

—Clean up the foreshore, at completion of extraction operations, to standards established at the time by relevant government authorities.

Earlier this week, Construction Aggregates Limited announced that the $45 million housing project planned for 800 acres off Metchosin Road has been postponed for 20 years.

Instead, it is proposing to the regional district and to the province to construct a new processing plant and loading facility at the pit to increase gravel production.

Colby Wins Fellowship

Richard Colby, deputy minister of recreation and conservation has been awarded a fellowship by the Professional Photographers Association of B.C.

Colby was the group's first president.

At a seminar and print show held this week in Brentwood, Jorgen Svendsen, 1984 Crescent, was presented three trophies for best child portrait, best color photgraph and best wedding photograph.

Other winners were: Merle Sommerville, Crescent Beach; Hans Giesen, Kelowna; Charles Worsley, Duncan; B. C. Jennings, Vancouver, Helmuth Mayrhofer, Nelson; Norm Williams, Chilliwack; Ulbe Van Dyke, North Vancouver and Ken Whitmire, Yakima, Wash.

Pick President

Peggy Dyson has been elected president of the City of Gardens chapter of Sweet Adelines Inc. singing group.

Leona Hanley is the new vice-president, Kay Boughey recording secretary, Betty McConnell corresponding secretary and Edith Pearson treasurer.

Trustees Now 'Humanitarian'

The B.C. School Trustees' Association is becoming a "more humanitarian" group of people, says Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn.

Bunn, just returned from the annual BCSTA convention in Vancouver, said today the association is still dominated by a "hard core nub of conservatives but 20th century people are coming to the fore."

Conventions in the past, he said, have always been a struggle between conservative rural boards and more progressive urban boards but this year the division was less apparent.

As an example, Bunn said a motion recommending abolition of religious exercises in secondary schools was passed by a large majority after being rejected by the convention four times in the past 15 years.

Another motion, brought forward by the Victoria board, which called for flexible age limits on school entry, was also passed by the convention.

Bunn, a veteran of BCSTA conventions, said he was disappointed, however, with the decision of the association to support the right to lockout and the right to strike in teacher-trustee salary negotiations.

The B.C. Teachers' Federation voted last month to reject inclusion of a right to strike clause in contract negotiations and agreed to retain compulsory arbitration.

"I think the trustees made a backward step," Bunn said, "it depressed me.

"But generally there's a more sensible, more sophisticated feeling within the association, I think," he said.

Sooke Arena Poll June 16

Sooke electoral area voters are expected to go to the polls June 16 on a $650,000 arena referendum.

The Capital Regional District board gave three readings to the necessary bylaw Wednesday and referred it to the province's inspector of municipalities whose approval is also necessary before the referendum can be held.

Board directors agreed to try to hold the referendum June 16, otherwise June 23.

After some discussion, it was agreed that the whole Sooke electoral area, from East Sooke to Port Renfrew, should be designated as the arena area and parts of it should not be allowed to secede.

Sooke electoral director Howard Elder said there is "no question that we should have a referendum" but he asked the board to consider whether the whole area should pay the costs or whether parts of it should be divided off.

View Royal director Gar Bulmer said there are small groups which don't want to participate in any community, but they still derived the over-all benefit.

Langford director Earl Pallister said the whole electoral area should participate because otherwise it decreased the tax base for financing the arena.

Colwood director Dick Emery said "to have some areas in and some out is not good at all."

And Mac Tipton, alternate director for Metchosin, said it was "unfortunate" that his area opted out of purchasing the old Colwood racetrack for a park.

Cost of building and operating the arena is expected to be about four mills.

Baby's Fine—Dad's a Wreck

COAL HARBOUR — It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience after which mother and child were doing fine, but father was a wreck.

"And there's no way," George Cowan wants to go through "that" again.

"It scared the hell out of me."

Cowan said his wife, Katherine, woke him at 2 a.m. Wednesday complaining of labor pains andhe immediately called the family doctor.

But not soon enough.

"Fifteen minutes later, I called him back to say the baby was already here," Cowan said.

The couple's fourth child, Jason Ernest, weighing in at six pounds 12½ ounces, came through the half-hour home-delivery process with flying colors directed by his father.

A proud Cowan stated today: "I was surprised how easily everything went, but it's definitely the last time; I'm not looking forward to a second experience like that."

Shortly after all the home-staged action, the doctor and an ambulance arrived to take mother and son to Port Hardy hospital. They're doing fine.

Special, because the single whiskies are not shocked by being dumped together at once. We let them rest quietly awhile, so that the blend will have greater uniformity and more dependable consistency.

In this Scottish city, on the banks of the River Tay, nothing much has changed. The castle is still there, and every year, from January to December, when the air is chill and pure and the water is cold, the people of Perth make Dewar's Scotch Whisky.

Son Tommy Dewar looked for new markets at the 1885 Brewer's Show and used a bagpipe to entertain. (The first commercial use of music?)

Land 'Thaw' Soon—Stupich

STUPICH
. . . three more weeks

A provincial land commission — which would catalogue real estate and end the five-month-old agricultural land freeze — "could be rolling within three weeks," Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich told Victoria Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

Establishment of the commission, coupled with quick completion of land cataloguing by the Capital Regional District, would probably allow the freeze to be lifted within 90 days on southern Vancouver Island.

The minister was guest speaker at a general meeting of the chamber attended by more than 100 members in Empress Hotel.

"I wish I could tell you the land commission will be established tomorrow," Stupich said, explaining that recently the out-of-town demands upon ministers has made attendance at regular cabinet meetings sparse.

"Once the commission is named it will issue instructions pursuant to the legislation (Land Commission Act)."

He said the designation of agricultural land would be up to regional districts and maps are now being issued by the agriculture department suggesting types of land suitable for cultivation and those less suitable, or likely construction sites.

Stupich said he understood the Capital Regional District is well along with its plans to designate the various types of land and that the district could come within the 90-day period for approval following public hearings.

"When a regional district complies, then the freeze within that district will be lifted," the minister said.

He noted that although the cabinet's order imposing the freeze last November had specified only land taxed as agricultural, subdivision of all types of undeveloped land ceased in B.C.

There are many areas on Vancouver Island, he said, where development of non-agricultural land stopped or was not undertaken.

"People paniched," Stupick said. "In some cases approving officers panicked . . . people were a little afraid of doing anything for fear of doing something wrong.

"My advice now is, hang on a bit more — things will be better," Stupich said.

The minister, whose home riding is Nanaimo, said he supported chamber efforts to have later ferry sailings from Swartz Bay to the mainland, and for a third crossing between the mainland and Vancouver Island in order to provide easy access to services which residents of Gabriola will demand as 3,500 land parcels are developed.

The number of parcels that exist now will support a population of 10,000 Stupick said. In order to preserve the character of the island it will be necessary to give residents an easy way to reach commercial services, with a minimum of services on Gabriola.

Steel Rollback Call?

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray told the House of Commons Wednesday he will consider asking Canada's steel companies to maintain current prices for structural steel rather than hike them as announced Monday by major producers.

However, replying to a question from David Orlikow (NDP Winnipeg North), Gray made no more commitment except to say that he would "be happy to consider" the Manitoba MP's plea.

Orlikow described the new price increases as "unconscionable."

The veteran socialist said serious consequencies will result from the new price increases.

What's more, charged Orlikow, the steel companies don't need to charge any more for their products.

"The profits of steel companies showed an increase this year as compared to last year of 60 per cent," Orlikow pointed out.

Man Branded By Cellmate At Request

ODESSA, Tex. (UPI) — A cellmate, using razor blades, wire, and burning paper for heat, branded confessed murderer Johnny Meadows in a Dallas jail at Meadows' own request, Texas Attorney-General John Hill said Wednesday.

Meadows had claimed jail officials in Odessa burned four imprints of the state of Texas into his back. Meadows' attorneys showed photograps of the brands at a pre-trial hearing in Dallas, April 28 and the judge ordered a formal state investigation.

The last initial of each of four women Meadows has confessed to killing was branded inside the state imprints. But Hill said during the course of the investigation Meadows confessed that the brands were done in a community cell of the Dallas jail by another prisoner at Meadows' request.

"This map was outlined on paper and traced onto Meadows' back by a fellow inmate," Hill said. "A wire from a mop and broom was shaped to form the map of Texas, and another wire was shaped for the initials. The wires were heated by use of paper fire bombs."

Hill said the reason Meadows gave for having this done "was to get back at officers in Ector County, Texas, (Odessa)."

Hill's report absolved authorities in Dallas and Odessa of any blame.

Second Trial Monday

Trial for Ernest Lavern Hotvedt, charged with the non-capital murder of his wife in Victoria Nov. 5, begins Monday in New Westminster.

Hotvedt, 28, was charged after his wife Linda, 28, was found dead in her apartment at 1255 Balmoral.

After four days of testimony which began in Victoria Jan. 8, a B.C. Supreme Court jury was unable to reach a verdict and Mr. Justice Douglas E. Andrews ordered a new trial.

Prosecutors are Alan Bigelow and Robert Edwards. Defence counsel is Dermod Owen-Flood.

Tutors of Deprived Again Bid for Aid

Another appeal will be made to Greater Victoria school board next week for funds to establish special tutoring for deprived children.

Victoria Self Help Society first approached the board with its scheme for "Outreach Tutoring" last month but was told the administration recommended against the program and trustees wanted more information.

The society wants $11,638 to set up the program, which would involve one full-time salaried director to co-ordinate the work of 20 volunteer university education students working with low income families.

Low income children, they say, often have unique problems in school because of their social background and the lack of learning resources in the home.

The tutoring program would allow a volunteer to go into the home and set up a "realistic home study program" for the child, taking into consideration his actual living conditions.

The society, under the direction of Mrs. Judith McCandless, plans to re-submit its brief to the board Monday with additional information and arguments.

They contend the school board should not have complete control over the project since school personnel "are not familiar with low income problems" and their efforts to help these children "lead to frustration for everyone involved."

"Therefore," the brief says, "we would like to see a member of the low income society placed, if not as director, then as an adviser to the director."

The project will not conflict with the Victoria Teachers' Project now in operation at Beacon Hill School because that group deals only with slow learners while "Outreach" will help only the low income child who is falling behind, the brief says.

Children will be referred to the group by family social workers and only children between the ages of 6 and 12, who are living with one parent, will be tutored.

Tutors will have at least three years of university and will receive additional training in individual tutoring from UVic educational psychologist Dr. Ron Tinney as well as instruction in low-income life from Mrs. McCandless.

"Our point is that we'll be offering something different from the school," says Mrs. McCandless.

"The cultural environment of the school assumes a middle-class kind of lifestyle that low income children have never experienced.

"A tutor will help these children set up a home study environment and bring in resource material so they won't start falling behind in school," she said.

Mrs. McCandless is a single parent and has been a teacher in Sooke school district.

MISSIONARY WALKATHON

A 14-mile walkathon will highlight a three-day missionary conference May 18-20 at the Free Methodist Church.

Young church members making the walk May 19 will raise money to help build a hospital in Zaire, Africa, in an area where 100,000 people are without medical facilities.

Guest speakers at the conference will be Warren Johnson, a missionary for 20 years in South Africa, and Ken McVety of Tokyo, director of the Word of Life Press, largest producer of Christian literature in Asia.

The conference, open to the public, begins May 18 at 7:30 p.m.

Theories Cloud Horizons

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — The president of the Mining Association of Canada, C. R. Elliott of Toronto, said Wednesday that uncertainty about provincial government tax intentions hangs like a cloud over the industry.

He said the NDP governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have "seriously undermined the confidence of those engaged in exploration." The exploration and mining industries are also under sharp attack from ecologists, he said.

Speaking to the Great Plains Project, Mr. Elliott said other provinces probably are studying the extent to which taxes on mining can be increased without disturbing the health of the provincial economy.

In the Northwest Territories, he said, mining companies will have to furnish costly social amenities to attract workers, and the companies won't shoulder such expenses without the prospect of a reasonable profit level.

"If the government of Canada and the provinces do not take steps to clear up this unhappy political atmosphere, they will indeed find the private sector disappearing from the exploration for new mines."

Keith O'Brien of Toronto, a taxation specialist with International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., suggested the federal government either subsidize prices or remove all taxes on fuels and gas in the Northwest Territories to spur developments.

He said the Canadian government could make all people residing north of the 60th parallel exempt from income tax. This would cost the government only $10 million a year.

Gordon Morris, one of about 250 experts in gas, oil, transport and mining technology drawn to the conference on the Churchill Arctic corridor, said incentives are offered to Russians in Siberia.

AUTHORIZED DATSUN PARTS & SERVICE

DATSUN 1200 carries on the tradition of the classic 2-door coupe.

The 2-door coupe has made automotive history. It's tough, it's quick. And traditionally, it looks a lot sportier than its bigger brothers. When Datsun set out to design the best 2-door coupe around, we stuck to the principles that made the coupe a classic.

The '37 Ford Coupe (centre right) gave you maximum comfort in its day. For its time, the '39 Packard Opera Coupe (centre left) handled like a dream. Our own 1932 Datsun coupe (that's it in the background) was one of the toughest, most dependable cars built that year.

In the Datsun 1200, we've simply updated these features with a large dollop of modern technology and the feel for good, solid auto building that's been our trademark over the last 40 years. So when you want tough, quick, sporty transportation, we think our Datsun 1200 is all you really need.

Hog Prices Bankrupt Nixon Relative

BUDDING ACTRESS: Twiggy has a new look as she develops her new career as an actress. The once gaunt British model is now in Hollywood making a suspense film after earlier playing starring role in The Boyfriend.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Another of President Nixon's California relatives has reported he has been on welfare. The relative has filed for bankruptcy because "the price of hogs went down.

The president's second cousin, Ronald E. Milhouse of Grass Valley, Calif., reported liabilities totalling $4,871 and assests of $1,419.

His bankruptcy petition says Milhouse raised hogs with another man in 1971 but "the price of hogs went down and we lost money, so we broke up the partnership."

In February, 1971, Ronald's father, Philip Milhouse and his wife Anna revealed they were disabled and dependent on welfare.

OTTAWA — William Dodge, secretary-treasurer of the 1.8 million-member Canadian Labor Congress (CLC, has become the first publicly-announced contender for the congress presidency which becomes vacant next year when incumbent Donald MacDonald steps down.

Dodge has been an active leader in the union movement since the 1930s and has served as secretary-treasurer of the CLC since 1968. For 10 years before that he was a vice-president.

Other possible candidates for the presidency are William Mahoney, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America, Joe Morris, CLC executive vice-president, and Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers.

TORONTO — Larry Sefton, director of District 6, United Steelworkers of America, died in hospital Wednesday. He was 56. A native of Iroquois Falls, Ont., Sefton became director of the district in 1953. Under his leadership, it increased in membership to its present 126,000 from 36,000.

PARIS — Romano Mussolini, jazz musician and son of the late Italian dictator, Benito Mussolini, sued a French priest and the magazine Paris-Match for $225,000 Wednesday over an article alleging his father ordered the assassination of Pope Pius XI, who died in 1939. A court which heard the case announced that judgment would not be given for two weeks.

MONTREAL — Helene Baillargeon, the Helene of the television program Chez Helene, is out of a job, but she's not out of work. After 14 years of teaching painless French to pre-schoolers for the CBC, her program has been cancelled.

"I'll have lots to do," she said in an interview Wednesday. "I have a chance to go back to involvement in French networks, and I'm reading a script now for a film this fall by a French producer. My plans are to go on doing shows."

CBC said her 15-minute show was cancelled because it outlived its usefulness and because it was "obviously outdated" in the age of Sesame Street.

NEW YORK — A millionaire who couldn't take it with him, left part of his estate to two local bars for free drinks for his friends, it was learned Wednesday.

Douglas S. McKelvy, who died earlier this year, left $12,000 to the taverns for free drinks for the bars' patrons. The request became known when his will was admitted to probate.

Frank McIldaine, owner of one of the taverns, said McKelvy was "a real gentleman — one of the last."

NEW YORK — Actress Debbie Reynolds testified that she thought her 15-year-old son was playing with a stage prop when he accidentally shot himself in the thigh in their Manhattan apartment April 8. Miss Reynolds took the stand in Manhattan criminal court in an unsuccessful effort to get a charge of illegal gun possession against her dismissed. A further hearing was set for May 22 and Miss Reynolds was freed on her own recognizance.

MOSCOW — New York Mayor John Lindsay met Premier Alexei Kosygin this week and "had a friendly talk" about "specific opportunities for expanding contacts between New York and Moscow," Tass News Agency said.

Lindsay arrived in the Soviet Union May 3 at the invitation of Moscow city council. He was scheduled to leave today.

WASHINGTON — Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, who led American marines at Guadalcanal and upset the Japanese timetable of conquest, died Tuesday. Vandegrift, 86, led the United States Marine Corps from 1944 until his retirement four years later. A major-general at the time, Vandegrift moved to Guadalcanal with his men. He lived, worked and fought with them in the months of countless jungle battles that gradually wiped out the Japanese.

BELMONT, Calif. — Mrs. Ruby Smith arrived home from her job as a shipping clerk to find her husband dead of a heart attack. The shock killed her.

As she telephoned Kaiser Hospital in Redwood City to ask for an ambulance, the switchboard operator who took the call said the telephone suddenly went silent.

Police and amulance crews arrived at the Smith home to find Mrs. Smith lying on the floor next to her husband with the telephone dangling beside her.

The couple, married 40 years, had died within hours of each other.

H. RAP BROWN DRAWS 5 TO 15

NEW YORK (UPI) — H. Rap Brown, a leading black militant of the late 1960s, was sentenced Wednesday to between five and 15 years in prison for his part in the robbery of a bar.

His only comment, made before sentencing, was: "Truth crushed to the earth will rise again." One of those who asked for leniency, playwright Imamu Amiri Baraka, said Brown was "a hero to us" and added, "The system systematically kills off our leaders."

Manhattan supreme court justice Arnold Fraiman said, however, that he was sentencing Brown "not as a black man and not as a white man" but as a convicted criminal. His guilt in the October, 1971, holdup of the Red Carpet Lounge on Manhattan's west side had been "overwhelmingly established," Fraiman said.

Brown, 29, had been chairman of the student non-violent co-ordinating committee. He had been charged with inciting a riot in Cambridge, Md., but disappeared as the case came to trial. Police sought him for more than three years before he was caught during the holdup.

Warm Praise For a Chiller

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

An outstanding example of ensemble playing was seen Wednesday in what Schools Drama Festival adjudicator Esse Ljungh called "a great eerie, chilling night."

As the final presentation on the program at Mount Douglas Secondary, the host school with a cast of 74 under the direction of Mike Stephen held the audience of several hundred spellbound.

"You could have heard a pin drop and it would have sounded like a two-by-four," Ljungh commented.

The play was The Lottery, adapted from Shirley Jackson's short story by Brainerd Duffield, a terrifying concept of ritual and human sacrifice in modern times.

Aside from the excellence of the ensemble playing, Ljungh had praise for the setting and the fine direction that had resulted in tension that built to a powerful climax.

He spoke of the attention to detail that had projected so many distinct personalities, and the facial expressions of the crowd.

"Everybody was right in it," he emphasized.

Among generally excellent performances, he noted those of Fiona Campbell, Dave Cottingham, Charles McDairmid, Carol Savage and Dave Pollard.

The hosts also presented the first play of the evening, Women at the Tomb by Michel Ghelderode, and this, too, was directed by Stephen with Yvonne Howland.

Ljungh felt that great credit was due here for undertaking a difficut play by a great modern playwright.

He considered it was well directed and interesting in costume color. The set, however, had posed some problems for the actors, he said.

Among good performances he particularly noted Karen Frey, who had "considerable animation and kept everyone around her on edge", and Barb Pennock, who had created a real mood in the last moments of the play.

The Wheelchair, written and directed by Colin Skinner, had a cast that combined students from Glenlyon and Norfolk House schools.

Death had also haunted this play which had to do with voodoo and ESP, among other things.

The adjudicator considered it well written and directed but suggested that it needed a better tempo. "It started to drag and so became boring," he said.

"It would have lost a great deal more without the fine, firm performance of Nona Avren," Ljungh remarked. He also commended especially the work of Mary Gladwell and Liz Arnott.

He thought the cast generally had utilized the materials of the play well.

Tonight's performances will take place at Highrock Junior Secondary where the program will consist of plays by Highrock and Mount View Senior Secondary. Curtain time is 7:30.

TROUBLE SHOOTERS COMPETE

Two Victoria High School students will test their mechanical skills next week in a province-wide auto mechanic contest.

The annual Chrysler Trouble Shooting Contest will be held in Vancouver Monday and feature teams from 19 B.C. high schools.

Andre Coupe, 18, and Michael Dufton, 17, will represent Vic High in the one-day competition which will select a winner to advance to the National Trouble Shooting finals in Qinnipeg June 18 to 20.

Contestants first write an exam and then work on malfunctioning cars. The first to put their car in running order wins the practical side of the competition, but the over-all winner must do well in both halves of the contest.

Twenty regional contests are being held throughout Canada and the total prize list amounts to $50,000 in scholarships, trophies, tools and automotive components for their schools.

Papal Gift Atop Everest

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — A plaque of the Virgin Mary and Child given by Pope Paul to a 63-man Italian Everest expedition now stands on the summit of the world's highest mountain, the Vatican said.

Sources said Pope Paul had received a telegram from millionaire explorer Guido Monzino stating that "from the top of Everest the Madonna and Child will represent for ever the loftiness and everlastingness of our faith."

World Food Reserves Dwindle

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — World grain reserves have dipped to a point where rich and poor countries alike will depend "on the vagaries of a single year's weather" for adequate supplies, a UN group was told Wednesday.

Remaining stocks no longer provide an adequate buffer against crop failure, said E. M. Ojala, assistant director of the world Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

He said food supplies for millions during the coming year thus will depend almost entirely on 1973 harvests.

"This is not a tolerable human condition in the latter part of the 20th Century," the New Zealander added in a report to the UN Economic and Social Council.

"Governments and farmers in several important regions have reacted promptly to the situation," he said. "But the crop outlook is still uncertain — as demonstrated by recent floods in the United States."

Ojala said the FAO will propose at its meeting next month in Rome a "minimum world food security" program.

The proposal from FAO Director-General Addeke H. Boerma of the Netherlands would involve consultations and recommendations by the major grain-consuming countries on minimum national reserves of food grains.

"The world has drifted into this time of danger because there is, up to this moment, no acceptance by the international community . . . of the concept of a minimum safe level of basic food stocks for the world as a whole," Ojala said.

The world could afford this so long as the U.S. and Canada had huge surpluses, he said.

"But these have now disappeared . . . the governments concerned have developed new techniques for adjusting production to demand."

Surpluses may reappear in years to come," but in FAO's view they will be temporary and undependable as the world's central food reserve in moments of crisis."

The ultimate solution, he said, is faster crop development in the poor countries. But in the meantime, the "new and dangerous decline in world cereal stocks calls for a new international initiative to ensure at all times a minimum level of world food security."

Pontiac Le Mans

Le Mans Sport Coupe

GM Canada

No matter how you look at it, Pontiac Le Mans is a cut above other intermediates.

Look at the great new Le Mans Sport Coupe illustrated above. Its distinguishing features include louvered side windows at the rear and a choice (at no extra cost!) of either full-foam front bucket seats or a notchback bench seat with a handy pull-down centre armrest.

And the Le Mans Sport Coupe is only one of a whole family of trim-size Pontiacs.

Whichever Le Mans you choose, you can count on getting everything from front disc brakes and a double-panel acoustic roof to a tuned "big-car" ride and Pontiac performance—at a trim-size price.

Le Mans has been totally restyled and re-engineered for 1973 by the people who first concealed the windshield wipers, hid the radio antenna in the windshield and came out with a GTO energy-absorbing front end (latest example of their innovation: the spectacular, all-new Grand Am). It all started with Pontiac.

And you know who invented Wide-Track!

Pontiac is used to being first. That's what helps keep Pontiac a cut above.

And that's saying plenty for your deal—when you deal today on a trim-size Pontiac Le Mans.

Why not get together with your Pontiac dealer right now! And see what's news.

Remember... it's the car that makes the deal.

Some of the equipment shown is optional at extra cost.

Giant Planes Fly Gas

CHURCHILL, MAN. (CP) Representatives of a Calgary company Wednesday described plans for a fleet of 18-engine planes to transport liquified gas from the Arctic.

G. S. Hill and F. S. Maldestuto of Arctic Helifloat Ltd., presented a paper to a conference on development of the Churchill corridor to the Arctic, organized by the Great Plains project.

The paper said 36 of the proposed aircraft could move three billion cubic feet of liquified gas daily, or one trillion cubic feet annually, equivalent to a year's operation of a 48-inch pipeline.

$812 MILLION

Total cost of the 36 aircraft would be $812 million. The transportation system, including ground and navigation facilities and a plant to liquify natural gas, is estimated at $2.4 billion.

The proposed planes, the men said, would have a wingspan of 838 feet and with 18 rotor engines on three wings would have a lift capacity of five to 10 times that of a conventional winged aircraft.

ONE CENT PER TON

The representatives said the capacity of the plane over a range of 3,000 miles is in excess of six million pounds, with a total transportation cost of less than one cent per ton mile.

The conference also heard a presentation from Robert Withington who said Boeing's 12-engine resource carrying aircraft would reduce the per-ton mile rate to an estimated 1.5 cents.

Withington said 30 to 40 of the air giants could do the work of a 48-inch pipeline. The plane would have a wing span of 475 feet and a length of 400 feet.

Provos Disband

BELFAST (Reuter) — A top company of the Provisional Irish Republican Army in Belfast has been temporarily disbanded after an intensive crackdown by the British Army. Eight of the company's officers have been arrested or shot by army paratroops in the Ardoyne area of the city in the last two months. An army spokesman said Friday: "All of their top men have been disposed of—one way or another."

Brain Can Recover

BOSTON (AP) Researchers say that work with monkeys may indicate that people with brain damage can recover some lost physical functions by using other parts of their brains.

A monkey with the surface of its brain cut away lived a record 84 days and recovered some of the functions normally controlled by that removed portion, researchers said.

"But it would be wrong to say at this point that there is any clinical application of this now — it's a long way off," said Dr. Derek Denny-Brown, neurology professor emeritus of the Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Denny-Brown conducted his research at the New England Regional Primate Research Centre in Southborough with the assistance of Dr. N. Yanagisawa, now with the Institute of Brain Research at the University of Tokyo.

The researchers removed the cerebral cortex, or grey matter, from the brains of several infant monkeys. This carpet of nerve cells which covers the outside of the large brain lobes controls movement and behavior.

It also is well known that lower parts of the brain contribute to controlling movement, but the nature and extent of this contribution, and how the grey matter controls these lower centres, is unknown.

Researchers are looking for ways to strengthen and direct the secondary control systems in the lower brain centres so that they may take over in brain damage cases when the primary motor control centre is knocked out or disabled, Dr. Denny-Brown told the fourth annual assembly of the Primate Research Centre.

The young monkey that survived 84 days made substantial progress toward recovering some motor function, before he died, Dr. Denny-Brown said, and he could have lived longer had not the researchers tried a new test which proved fatal.

CLC Out to Stop Breakaway Unions

VIALA
. . . no comment

OTTAWA (CP) — A special meeting of Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) affiliate leaders decided Wednesday to launch a campaign to fight threats from breakaway nationalist union groups, sources said today.

The campaign, to cost an estimated $1 million, must still be approved by the 29-member executive council of the CLC but, as many of the executive members attended the meeting here Wednesday, acceptance seems certain.

More than 80 leaders of CLC affiliates and the congress attended. National as well as international union leaders were present.

About 62 per cent of Canada's organized labor belong to international unions with headquarters in the U.S.

The international groups have been under strong pressure from all-Canadian unions recently, particularly in British Columbia, where the United Steel Workers of America have been a special target of the nationalist groups.

The meeting Wednesday was closed and CLC officials declined comment after it ended.

But sources indicated that a seven-point plan to combat the nationalist challenge was adopted.

Included in the plan is a public relations drive to get across the view that the nationalist campaign is destructive of labor interests.

Greater efforts will be made to organize non-union labor, defend CLC affiliates against challenges, raise funds, plan and carry out various projects and co-operate with affiliates for offensive and defensive action.

An organizing committee also is to be established to include congress and affiliate officers.

Decisions made at the meeting go before the executive council when it meets here next week.

No Word By IWA

A two-sentence statement was the only comment being made today by the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America which lost three certification votes to the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada Tuesday.

Duncan IWA president Fernie Viala said: "The Labor Relations Board has not handed down a decision on the certification votes. Any comment made prior to that decision would be premature."

The PPWC scored close victories in the votes among employees of CIPA Lumber and Mayo Lumber in Nanaimo and at Ladysmith Forest Products. The votes will be scrutinized by the Labor Relations Board before any formal change in certification occurs.

HEROIN TRIAL SET FOR FIVE

Five persons arrested in Victoria last October will stand trial, probably in early June, on two counts of conspiracy connected with heroin trafficking.

Judge F. S. Green today ruled on the substance of a preliminary hearing which began Jan. 8, saying there is sufficient evidence to charge the five.

The hearing was held in sessions closed to the press.

The five accused are Daniel Hadden, 57, of 1018 Oliphant, Robert Langer, 30, of 1414 Hillside, Michael Kincses, 27, of 1414 Hillside, Sharon Dannenberg, 28, of 425 Quebec and Wendy Dance, 25, of 2321 Cook.

RCMP made the arrests and seized 400 capsules of heroin, which have a street value of $8,000.

The trial is expected to take three weeks.

The charges are conspiracy to traffic in narcotics and conspiracy to possess narcotics for the purpose of trafficking.

Prosecuting for the Crown is Cecil Branson. Representing the accused: Dorothy Fetterley for Hadden, Robin Dalziel for Dannenberg, Douglas Macfarlane and David Lysson for Langer and Robert Price for Kincses and Dance.

Natural Gas Hearings Soon

VANCOUVER (CP) — The new B.C. Energy Commission may soon hold public hearings on the natural gas industry, the commission's chairman said Wednesday.

James Rhodes made the comment at a news conference following the commission's first meeting. Attorney-General Alex Macdonald had said in appointing the commission on Monday that natural gas would be the first priority, with the commission preparing a position paper on a new export agreement between Westcoast Transmission and El Paso Natural Gas of Texas.

Rhodes said Wednesday the public hearings would be for the purpose of gathering "opinions on the natural gas business." Industry representatives would be able to appear before the public hearings, he said, but there will be no private sessions between the commission and the companies.

He said no date has been set for the hearings, but the commission is required to report to the government on natural gas by Sept. 15.

Commission member Andrew Thompson has been assigned to advise the commission on the natural gas and oil situation, Rhodes said.

Among matters for Thompson's study will be possible export controls, taxation, and a report by consultant Al Boykiw of Calgary.

Labor Men Stay in Jail

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette of Quebec today denied published reports that three Quebec labor leaders jailed for contempt of court will be released next Tuesday.

He said requests for early release of the three now are on his desk in Quebec City. But he has not decided what to do about them.

Pilot Under Stress, 118 Die

LONDON (UPI) — On June 18, 1972, Flight BE458 roared off the runway at London's Heathrow airport with an angry pilot with heart trouble and an inexperienced 22-year-old co-pilot at the controls.

Inside the cockpit somebody pulled a lever, sending the Brussels-bound British European Airways Trident plunging into a meadow near the airport. All 118 persons on board were killed in Britain's worst air disaster.

Results of a public inquiry released Wednesday blamed the crash on cockpit errors, crew inexperience and inadequate training and a heart attack suffered by the jetliner's pilot, Capt. Stanley Key, 51.

But the nine-week inquiry failed to resolve the big mystery: Who pulled the lever and why?

The inquiry's report said the "immediate cause" of the crash was the premature retraction of a flap-like "droop" device on the front of the airline's wings, sending the plane into a stall. The device enables the rear-engined aircraft to climb steeply on take-off.

"What seems inescapable is that the reason for the movement of the lever lies either in the inexperience" of the co-pilot, Jeremy Keighley, "or the impaired mental faculties of Capt. Key or both," the report said.

An autopsy showed Key suffered a heart seizure shortly before the crash, probably as a result of a "violent argument" he had in the airline's crew room over a proposed pilots strike before the flight, the report said.

"It is clear Capt. Key was very angry indeed," the report said. "It is not unreasonable to suppose that it (the argument) may have been the cause of the initial rise in blood pressure which resulted in the rupture of the small blood vessels (in Key's heart)."

Fear Grips Wounded Knee

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (WP) — Some Indian homeowners in this ravaged hamlet said Wednesday they fear they will be the target of retaliation by reserve police and local vigilante squads once federal law officers complete their pullout after 70 days of armed confrontation.

The residents, who are among 30 who elected to remain in their homes to the end of the seige, expressed fear that it would be assumed that because they stayed, they were supporters of the American Indian Movement (A.I.M.) militants who seized the Hamlet Feb. 27.

Some charged that Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) police already violated the terms of the peace agreement by sending search parties into Wounded Knee Tuesday to ransack homes and cars.

Federal officials denied the residents have been harassed or are in any danger of retaliation.

However, there was evidence here Wednesday of ransacking of homes while the permanent residents were being processed by federal authorities at the main roadblock to the hamlet.

The doors of some houses were smashed in and clothes and personal effects were scattered about, presumably in search of hidden weapons. The trunks of a dozen automobiles owned by residents were pryed open while authorities swept the area for booby traps and caches of weapons.

Federal sources who were inside the hamlet at that time said five carloads of BIA investigators entered Wounded Knee shortly after 15 A.I.M. occupiers were arrested Tuesday and while the 30 residents were being questioned.

The agreement signed Saturday by U.S. officials and five traditional chiefs of the Teton Sioux, who had served as advisors to A.I.M., contained no provision for searches by anyone other than FBI agents and U.S. marshals.

Officials of the justice department's community relations service (CRS), which acted as conciliators during the occupation, said the resident's concerns over retribution are not entirely without foundation.

"We expect the BIA police to do their thing," said one CRS worker. "It is normal for the authorities to intimidate those who are left behind after everybody else leaves."

The CRS officials here left behind a residual force of nine representatives who will meet with BIA officials and elected Oglala Sioux tribal chairman Richard Wilson in an effort to soften any hostility towards Wounded Knee Indians who did not flee their homes at the outset of the takeover.

As federal forces demobilized their 15-mile armed perimeter Wednesday and began leaving the Pine Ridge Oglala Sioux reservation, the local residents who had been caught in the cross-fire of the nation's longest civil disturbance began emerging from their homes and walking freely about for the first time in more than two months.

They described an ordeal of seemingly interminable fire fights between A.I.M. militants and the federal forces. They said that they developed an almost Pavlovian response to the first sound of gunfire at night in which they would snatch small children and some water and run to a basement for shelter.

They recalled the eeriness of the rolling countryside being brightly lighted by flares and spotlights, and — during the day — of watching small puffs of dust being kicked up along dirt roads by machine gun and automatic rifle fire.

Several said they were at first fascinated by such unfamiliar sights as streams of tracer fire at night, but that as the crisis wore on they didn't even bother to look out their windows at the fighting.

Melvin Running Bear and his wife, Betty, who live in a three-bedroom bungalow in a small cluster of government-built homes, said the sounds of battle became so commonplace that they didn't even interrupt the casual play of their two small children.

"You just had to play out of sight when they started shooting; you just went to the basement," Running Bear said. "After you get used to it and you expect it, it's not so scary."

Red Tape Delay on Pay Hike Irks Canadian ICCS Force

SAIGON (CP) — Canadian servicemen with the international peace supervisory force here are becoming increasingly concerned by the apparent lack of progress on their requests for increased special allowances.

Maj. Gen. Duncan McAlpine, Canadian military commander, said Wednesday: "I appreciate the concern of the officers and men but I have made the appropriate representations to Ottawa and I know the matter is in the appropriate hands."

There is distinct resentment among many officers in the field who believe external affairs personnel with the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) are receiving allowances two or three times as large as the $180 package originally offered the military.

"It's all very well for external to argue that their people didn't join the department to step on a landmine in Vietnam," said a senior Canadian officer, "but then we didn't join the forces to fly around unarmed in helicopters that are being fired at."

Gen. McAlpine said the armed forces are supposed to receive rates of pay and allowances comparable to those paid throughout the public service.

"We basically are asking for equal pay for equal work," he said in an interview.

Adding that he is confident a "just solution" will be found by the federal treasury board, Gen. McAlpine said: "This whole issue is important to me because I know that the need for a fair solution is uppermost in the minds of the men under my command."

So far, the servicemen have received no extra allowances because the treasury board apparently is unable to find an acceptable figure for the payments.

Gen. McAlpine stressed, however, that he is confident all allowances will be made retroactive once a decision is made.

Virtually nobody in the forces here expects extra pay commensurate with that given to external affairs personnel. Most seem more anxious to be given an allowance which will reflect the value of their work as part of the overall Canadian effort.

They appear frustrated by the delays and what they consider to be Ottawa's indifference towards their position here.

One field officer commented: "We work like hell in pretty primitive conditions trying to do the impossible out here — sometimes succeeding — and it becomes a little hard to understand why Ottawa can't settle what should be a fairly simple matter."

Gen. McAlpine said the question of allowances is complicated because such things as pensions, medical benefits and other matters have to be taken into account when trying to equate the payments with those given other government departments.

But for an officer serving in a field post, living in unaccustomed heat and trying to perform what may be one of the world's most thankless jobs, the mathematical difficulties of giving him some extra pay have a ring of unreality.

Train Backed

LONDON (AP) — Three British universities have been given $787,000 in grants to develop a 500-mile-an-hour supertrain that will move above the tracks, held up by magnetic forces. The money was donated by the Wolfson Foundation to Warwick, Sussex and Cardiff universities. A foundation spokesman said the grants were designed to maintain research into supertrains following a government decision to end industrial research into an air-cushioned hovertrain.

Interior of Golden Age Manor has homey apartment units

Oak Bay Seniors' Home Ship-Shape for Opening

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The old sailor's easy chair is comfortable but he's hardly ever in it.

Howard McLean, 76, is one of seven men and 60 women living in the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club's low-cost housing complex for senior citizens on Milton.

The centre is receiving its final gussying up in preparation for the official opening by Mayor Frances Elford at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

McLean appears to be everywhere, tacking up pictures in one apartment and then hustling off to another to fix a towel rack.

Slow him down long enough to talk and it's apparent that here's a man who's always been pretty sure of his direction.

He started navigating toward becoming part of Golden Age Manor last August when it was announced that applications could be filed.

His was one of the first.

He's kept an eye on things ever since, making sure that everything is shipshape and Bristol-fashion.

"I've kept an eye on things ever since Farmer Construction started excavating," he said. "All through October, November and December I came here at least once a week — sometimes twice."

Although he's a Canadian, born in Winnipeg, most of the old salt's seatime was served under foreign flags.

His maritime beginnings were with the Royal Navy and the bulk of the remainder, the U.S. merchant marine where he rose from able seaman to master before his retirement in 1953.

His dark brown eyes glint with humor when he admits that he and the RN weren't exactly the best of friends.

"I didn't get along with them very well," he recalls, "It was fine when I was in the Dover minesweeper patrol in the First World War. But then they hauled me ashore and put me in signals.

"I was fairly good at it but that's not where I wanted to be so I buzzed off for three days. When I came back they put me on probation so I just buzzed off again.

"Mind you I could never stay away for more than three days at a time — that would have been desertion."

He adds, "I left the RN with the same rank I joined — the lowest of the low."

His RN time, however, did allow him to skip one rank and join the U.S. merchant marine as an able seaman.

His campaign ribbons, framed on one of the walls of his airy, spacious apartment, tell a story of their own.

They have to. Like many an old campaigner, he's not the type to dwell on such things.

Except for a short spell on the Great Lakes, his merchant navy time was spent in deep sea ships, mainly tankers and quite a few Liberty ships.

"One of the first Liberty ships I was put on was the Jason Lee. It was 15 years before I found out who he was. He was a Methodist evangelist and explorer who helped pioneer the Oregon Trail."

Twenty years after he "swallowed the anchor," McLean fully approves of his new shore base.

"I don't know how you could possibly improve things," he says.

He has one beef.

"Some of the women have too much damn junk in their rooms," he says.

Before Tuesday, the old master may have done something about this too.

Canadian Airlines Say Pets Fly in Safety Amid U.S. Controversy

By WAYNE HARDING
Times Staff

Controversy in the U.S. over the well-being of live animals shipped by air has not daunted Canadian airlines who assure the public their pets will fly with a minimum of discomfort and a maximum of safety.

"We carry animals all the time without any problem," says a public relations man for one of three carriers surveyed this week.

His confidence does not reflect the concern of the Consumers Union in the U.S. which has called on the Civil Aeronautics Board to establish minimum baggage compartment standards for the shipment of animals. CU backs up its request with cases in which atmospheric conditions in baggage holds has resulted in death and injury to pets.

There are no such standards in Canada but spokesmen for Air Canada, CP Air and Pacific Western Airlines insist there have been no cases of animals dying because of atmospheric conditions in their aircraft and, on the contrary, air travel for animals is safe.

Cages a Must

Here's what they say about the service they offer:

All three airlines require that animals be shipped in sturdy cages in the baggage compartments of planes. The only animals allowed in the passenger cabins are seeing-eye dogs.

Fares for animals travelling by Air Canada and CP Air are considerably higher than the cost of other freight. Pacific Western's rates are only slightly higher than freight rates.

Air Canada rates for shipping animals vary according to whether the animal is accompanied by a passenger and whether it is being carried on a domestic or international run.

The charge is twice the normal excess baggage rate on domestic flights for accompanied animals. This applies whether or not the caged animal is, in fact, excess baggage (excess with Air Canada being anything more than three pieces of baggage). On a flight between Vancouver and Toronto this would amount to a flat $14.

When the animal is accompanied by a passenger on international flights, the charge is one per cent of the first class one-way fare per kilo (2.2 pounds).

Minimum Fee

If the animal is not accompanied by a passenger and is sent air freight, on domestic flights Air Canada charges twice the regular air freight charge with a minimum fee set on 50 pounds. On international flights, the rate is based on a fixed rate for 100 pound freight. There is a minimum fee of $28.28.

CP Air has a simpler method of determining the charge: it is double the rate for air freight for the weight of the animal and cage.

On Pacific Western Airlines, the charge for carrying animals accompanied by passengers — on an "excess baggage basis" whether nor not the animal is excess baggage — is one half of one-per cent of the one-way passenger fare for the specific trip.

PWA also accepts animals for shipment by air freight with charges based on the company's regular freight tarrif for the weight of the animal and cage. The minimum fee is $10.

The liability the three companies accept, in the event animals die, are damaged or are lost while travelling varies considerably.

Air Canada accepts no liability.

CP Air will assume liability for 10 cents per pound of the shipment to a maximum liability of $10 if no valuation is declared. If the valuation is declared higher, a fee of $2 per $100, or part thereof, of valuation is charged.

PWA assumes liability for to $500 in cases where animals are shipped on the excess baggage basis. Liability for air freight is for 50 cents per pound to a maximum of $50. PWA will assume additional liability for a fee of 15 cents per $100 of extra valuation.

All three companies sell containers for shipping animals. They do not rent them. Air Canada sells its small "cat-size" unit for $7.25; the medium-size unit (for a dog about the size of an adult cocker spaniel) for $11.75 and a large unit (an adult German-shepherd size) for $19.25.

CP Air's three comparable sizes of animal-carriers vary from $10.40 to $19.

PWA sells two sizes of cage: the "cocker spaniel size" for $16 and the "German shepherd size" for $21.

All three companies insist conditions in the baggage holds are safe for animals.

Air Canada notes that animals are not placed in holds with "non compatible items" such as dry ice. (Air Canada's policy also is to load animals last into the holds and unloaded first.)

Holds Pressurized

PWA spokesman Des Delhaye is more specific about atmosphere in the holds. They vary slightly, he says. In the Boeing 737, for example, the in-flight temperature in the forward pit is "roughly the same" as in the cabin; in the rear pit, the in-flight temperature may be between 10 and 15 degrees lower than in the cabin.

In all craft, the baggage holds are pressurized.

Air Canada and CP Air personnel will water, feed and, in some cases, exercise animals if necessary.

Skipping Meals Put Down As Unwise Reducing Aid

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — While everyone is lamenting the high prices of food these days a Peterborough woman is quietly showing people how to feed their families a perfectly balanced diet and at the same time guaranteeing she can take a healthy slice off the food bills.

Mrs. Doreen Hicklin, the chief dietitian at Peterborough Civic Hospital, spends her days creating nutritionally balanced diets for patients, and instructing overweights and diabetics on how to eat properly.

"If people are eating properly their grocery bills will go down," she said. "That's a guarantee."

The nutrition expert, who recently participated in evaluating a survey of Trent University students' eating habits which showed 95 per cent were on poor to dangerous diets, said it is easy to eat properly once a person understands how the body uses the food we eat.

But few people do.

"It is a very simple process, really," she said. "Once you understand it you've got the key."

She said you need food just as your car needs gas, and you need it every four or five hours. That's because the maximum time energy lasts from a meal is about four hours. By that time the glucose — the energy drawn by the body from the foods we eat, and which is pumped into the blood from the liver — has dropped to a low level in the blood, kicking in your appetite as a signal for more food.

Whether you eat or not the body will satisfy its hunger. If you don't eat, the body begins to eat itself. The glucose level goes back up in the blood, and the hunger passes.

And that's where people make a big mistake by thinking they are losing excess fat by skipping meals.

The body compensates for lack of energy by extracting enough protein from lean body weight (muscle structure) to keep it going for another two hours.

Obviously, eating up your muscles by skipping meals is not a wise way to keep weight down. It makes for weak people.

Night of Candlelight and Whine

JELLY SIDE DOWN
nancy stahl

Just once during a power failure I would like to be stuck in an elevator with Rock Hudson.

Last night, instead, I was having dinner with my family.

"??%!!" snarled my husband into the darkness, setting his coffee cup squarely in the butter dish, while under the cover of darkness the children hurriedly began feeding their broccoli to the dog.

The cat's primitive jungle instincts returned; he leaped onto the table, crouched behind the mashed potatoes, and began stalking the pork chops.

"Where are the flashlights?" asked my husband. I had to admit that one was outside in the tree fort and the other was useless since its batteries were taking part in a school science project entitled "How a Dry Cell Works."

"Don't we have any candles?" he asked. Of course we have candles. We have six pink birthday candles in the kitchen cabinet beside the prune juice, not to mention the two fat Christmas candles I bought for half price in February which are in the basement in a box marked odd mittens. I finally found a half-inch stub left in the warmer for the fondue pot.

"Do you suppose that somebody has called the electric company?" I asked.

"Of course somebody has called them," my husband assured me. We stared through the window at the 57 houses shrouded in total darkness, forcibly repressing the gnawing suspicion that all 57 families believed that someone else must have called.

"We can't even watch T.V.," the children wailed.

"Never mind," I interjected gaily. "We'll listen to the transistor radio." After carefully combing the dial, I discovered that we had our choice between Selections from Sibelius, a debate over property taxes, or the closing hog prices. "What ever happened to Fibber McGee and Molly?" I grumbled. At that moment the lights came on again.

When Hubby Can't Spell Send Him Back to School

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my husband's spelling. It's horrid. I swear I don't know how he ever got out of high school.

He is just beginning his career as a policeman, and his poor spelling has already started giving him trouble. He has to make out reports in writing and when he writes, "suspishun" and "fezizting" on a report, it raises a lot of eyebrows.

He talks well, but his spelling is outrageous. I told him to carry a small dictionary and to look up any words he isn't sure of. He says: "You have to know how to spell a word before you can find it in the dictionary so what's the use?"

Abby, do you know where an adult can learn how to spell from scratch? Even if it took a year it would be miracle enough for us. Thank you. — Worried Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Call your school board and ask them what is available in their adult education department. Evening classes, or special tutoring could be the answer, but first your husband should take some tests to determine the kind of special help he needs.

DEAR ABBY: You've made references to May-December marriages, but you have never given any advice with regard to them. You should, and it should be one word. DON'T!

I have witnessed four, including my own, and all of them have been very unsatisfactory. Especially for the younger partner. Older husbands make poor fathers. Children make them nervous, and they are too tired to go anywhere with their young wives, and all too soon they are inadequate lovers.

A young woman is flattered to be pursued by a dashing, sophisticated "older" swain. But after they are married, he becomes a dull old man. When she is 22 and he is 36, the age difference doesn't show much, but when she is 35 and he is 49, things start to go downhill for her.

I wish someone would have wised me up. Until a woman has lived in such a marriage, she has no idea how many problems arise. — Short-Changed.

DEAR SHORT: I rarely give advice with regard to marriages and age because one's condition is far more important than his age. Some men of 65 are in much better shape than some men of 30. While youth is prized, it's no assurance of vim, vigor and virility.

DEAR ABBY: Today when so many marriages are going sour, may I tell you about one which was sweet for almost 63 years?

I married a wonderful girl in April, 1910. She was 5 years my senior. We had five children who bore us 27 grandchildren. They in turn bore us 10 great-grandchildren — all doing well.

My beloved died last December. I have her engagement and wedding rings and don't know what to do with them.

Would it be prudent to sell them and give the money to the orphans? Your reply would be appreciated — A Reader.

DEAR READER: Someone in your family may place a high sentimental value on the rings your beloved wore for so many years. Don't sell them before letting your family know you want to dispose of them. If more than one wants them, let them draw lots. And lots of luck.

CONFIDENTIAL to "White Versus Purple": Neither! To be appropriately attired for a divorce hearing, I'd vote for black. In a sense, one is burying a dead relationship.

Forecast for Friday, May 11
BY SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Confusion exists. Don't attempt too much at once. Outline goal. Stick to specified course. Be versatile without scattering forces. Sagittarian could play prominent role. Be aware of potential. Don't sell yourself short.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be pulled in two directions at once. Budget will have much to do with where you go. Cancer individual could play prominent role. Young person does not really have all the answers. Rise above petty details.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have more responsibility than you perhaps anticipated. Obtain hint from Aries message. You will be able to make contacts which prove of value. Be frank. Say what you mean and mean what you say. This now is productive policy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Legal procedure may block planned move or change. Relative could be in picture. Accent is on desire for more freedom and versatility. Key is not to overlook important details. Thoroughness now is your ally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid tendency to be careless with money. Being extravagant now would compound recent mistake. Know it and act accordingly. One who performs services may lack enthusiasm. If necessary, make needed change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What seemed a problem can be solved. Your timing improves. Family member becomes active ally. Be diplomatic. Avoid "I told you so" attitude. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles. Cycle is such that you can successfully take initiative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may not be dealing with facts as they exist. Key now is to see picture in proper perspective. You could be pulling wool over your own eyes. Specifically, realize that full story may be occurring behind the scenes. Withhold final judgment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friend who wants to do much is handicapped by work or health problem. You will have to assume more responsibility than originally intended. Know it and prepare accordingly. Capricorn is featured.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish what you start. Round out projects. Question of "love" arises. You may be challenged to prove intentions. Key is to stick within bounds. Means don't promise more than you can deliver. Study Libra message.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You need restoration of confidence, self-esteem. This is best obtained now by adopting a more independent course. Do something on your own. Be willing to take a chance on your abilities. One you care for wants to give you respect — if you so permit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emotions are apt to dominate. Don't get involved in money argument. One who means much to you could say foolish things. Condition is but temporary. Know it and respond in mature manner. Don't compound error.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You don't have what you need at present. Know it and go slow. Let others make first moves. Be a shrewd observer. One close to you may be better equipped to lead the way where legal commitments are concerned.

Most of us will have overeaten during the winter months. Now that summer is here you may earnestly want to take off your excess poundage.

The 36-page booklet Four Steps to Weight Control explains why proper weight is so important. It points out that life insurance surveys have shown that overweight persons are more prone to serious maladies than those of normal weight.

The booklet suggests some simple steps to solve your weight problem. First, see your doctor. He will tell you how many pounds you should take off and work out a suitable diet for you.

The second step is to figure out how soon you can reach your weight goal. Thirdly, you have to change your eating habits. This means studying the caloric value of foods and distributing them throughout the day into three appetizing, satisfying meals. For in-between snacks have some bouillion or tomato juice or nibble on celery, carrots or radishes.

The fourth step calls for increased physical activity. Here, again, your doctor will be able to advise you.

Sample menus and calorie tables are also included in this useful publication.

Housewife Hired as Seer For Radio Phone-In Crowd

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — There is something new on the merry-go-round of phone-in features which dominate this city's radio fare during the daylight hours — visions of the future.

The seer is Dolores Hale, a 41-year-old suburban housewife with the "God-given gift of ESP extra-sensory perception which I use to help others."

For about 10 minutes each weekday afternoon, Mrs. Hale sits at her kitchen table and makes predictions for persons who are fortunate enough to get through the jammed phone lines to New Westminster radio stativn CKNW. She contends she is accurate more than 90 per cent of the time in telling persons she has never met what the future holds for them.

She said she does it only with "concentration, and lots of it." She does not go into a trance when predicting — anyone walking into her kitchen while she's on the air might figure she's just trying to decide whether to give the grocer an order for rice or potatoes to feed her family of four.

She calls herself an ESP counsellor because "I abhor the word clairvoyant,"

"I get lumped in with a lot of other junk and garbage," she said.

"But I don't believe in spiritualism, reincarnation, astrology, teacup-reading, palmistry or anything like that. I'm a good Christian.

"I simply see visions. When a person phones and asks a question the vision just appears before my eyes."

But these visions, taken together, present a "very confused picture" to Dr. Raymond Corteen, associate professor of psychology at the University of British Columbia.

"I can in no way see this as demonstrable ESP," said Corteen, who has done research on the subject at Scotland's Edinburgh University with John Beloff, a respected scholar.

"We followed up people like this," Corteen said. "We tested people from different parts of the world but never found anyone who demonstrated anything but chance predictions."

Mrs. Hale handles only six calls a day and Hal Davis, assistant station manager at CKNW, said the first calls start coming in two hours before she goes on the air.

Any caller lucky enough to get through, even at that stage, will have to keep his phone tied up until CKNW disc jockey Wayne Cox calls Mrs. Hale at her Burnaby home, then acts as moderator as the station relays the calls through its studios to her home.

Mrs. Hale now is under exclusive contract to CKNW.

Even her short 10-minute spot takes hours of preparation, she said, because she likes to keep up on current affair and throw in a few world predictions to make the program more interesting.

Although she admits "it's pretty difficult to raise a family and pick up everything that's going on," she sees herself acquiring world fame, and sees a newspaper column.

"Im' not surprised," Corteen muses. "These people often follow a pattern as they become more successful.

"I often wonder which is stronger: their own need to believe in themselves or the public's need to believe in them."

Orange Muffin Chowder Mate

By MARY MOORE

Muffins are so easy to make and so homey no wonder they win the hearts of your family when you serve a warm basketful.

I have a new bright muffin recipe for you that really looks yellow because it has in it a cup of orange juice and 1-3 cup margarine to give it color.

Because I did these test muffins on the same day as I made Kamloops Clam Chowder (see Tuesday) we served them together. They were an unlikely combination but a great success so you cannot beat that.

ORANGE MUFFINS
(twelve 2½-inch)

(NOTE: for the orange juice dilute ½ cup fresh frozen orange juice concentrate with ½ cup water to give it extra strength.)

- 1 egg
- 2 Tbsp. sugar
- 1 cup extra strength orange juice (see note above)
- ⅓ cup melted margarine (cooled a little)
- ¾ cup raisins
- 1⅞ cups (2 cups less 2 tbsp.) stirred but unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 Tbsp. baking powder
- ¼ tsp. salt

In a bowl beat together the egg and sugar, then add the orange juice, melted margarine and raisins and stir. Stir baking powder and salt into the flour and add all at once and stir just enough to blend. Do not overstir. Muffin batter should look lumpy.

Spoon into 12 buttered 2½-inch muffin cups. This batter fills each cup.

Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 15 to 18 minutes. Serve warm with butter.

Now make some. They are beautiful.

BIG GAIN IN SOVIET FUEL

EDMONTON (CP) — The Soviet Union achieved an 11-fold increase in petroleum production in the past 23 years, a Russian petroleum official told the 24th annual technical meeting of the Petroleum Society of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy Wednesday.

Prof. G. G. Vakhitov, director of the All-Union Institute of Petroluem research in the U.S.S.R., said the rapid expansion was attributed to new oil recovery techniques and major new discoveries.

He and six other Soviet oil industry officials were presenting technical data as part of a Soviet-Canadian information exchange agreement. The papers were being presented in Russian and translated simultaneously.

Seven other representatives from the Soviet Union's gas ministry and its oil and gas construction industry cancelled their trip to Edmonton just prior to the conference.

The 500 scientists attending the meeting were told that Soviet oil production climbed to a projected 420 million tons this year from 38 million tons a year in 1950. This year's projected production of in excess of three billion barrels compares with about 700 million barrels produced in Alberta this year.

Vakhitov said 1.3 billion tons has been attributed to advanced water-flood and other advanced oil recovery techniques during the last 20 years.

He said during the last 10 years hundreds of new oil and gas fields have been found with advanced extracting industry techniques.

Brezhnev's Star Is on the Rise

By ROBERT G. KAISER
Washington Post
(A Commentary)

MOSCOW — Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist leader, has received unprecedented personal attention in the Soviet news media during the last 10 days.

Repeating a formula first used by the Communist party's central committee in a resolution passed April 27, Brezhnev has been cited repeatedly for his "personal contribution" to the party's "peace programm." The May edition of Pravda, the party newspaper, mentioned Brezh- "peace program." The May 2 2 Pravda of 1972 mentioned Brezhnev four times.

Western diplomats here take this burgeoning personal publicity as another sign of Brezhnev's increasing personal stature. These diplomats also note that it represents a significant departure from the principles of "collective leadership" that have prevailed here since the fall of Nikita Khrushchev in 1964.

BREZHNEV
. . . publicity figure

Diplomatic experts trace the current publicity campaign to a speech made Feb. 19 by the Soviet president, Nikolai Podgorny. Podgorny received the Order of Lenin that day on the occasion of his 70th birthday.

In a brief speech he noted "the great personal contribution of . . . Leonid Ilyich Brezhnev who has managed to unite and organize our collective (leadership) and our whole party to solve the problems we face."

Since then, Brezhnev's "personal contribution" has been cited increasingly often. But the publicity campaign really blossomed after the April 26-27 plenum of the Central Committee (which also approved changes in the ruling politburo which appear to strengthen Brezhnev's hand).

Nevertheless, the Soviet regime is maintaining at least the appearance of the three-headed leadership that has led the country since Khrushchev's ouster. For example, Tuesday's papers carry the text of a telegram to the East German leadership on the anniversary of the fall of Nazi Germany in 1945, and it is signed by Brezhnev, Podgorny and Premier Alexei Kosygin. Western experts believe Brezhnev's authority still depends on the other members of the politburo.

Still, Brezhnev himself is apparently willing to sanction (and perhaps to encourage) new attention for himself. This was most vividly obvious during the May Day celebrations.

Television coverage of the May Day parade in Red Square featured repeated shots of Brezhnev alone reviewing the parade from atop Lenin's mausoleum. Once Kosygin edged into the picture, and the camera quickly focused in closer on Brezhnev, cutting out the premier.

That night on the evening television news the commentator emphasized repeatedly that the name of Brezhnev and the party's peace program were "inseparable." Then the next morning's Pravda discarded all restraint in naming Brezhnev 72 different times.

Brezhnev was awarded the Lenin Peace Prize on May 1 and from then until Tuesday, the front page of every national Soviet daily paper has carried messages of congratulations to the prize-winner from foreign communists and leaders.

We'll Follow Lead of U.S. On Auto Emissions—Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to continue following the United States lead in auto emission standards — but cautiously, says Environment Minister Jack Davis.

"We don't see the end of the road at all clearly — nor does the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)," Davis said Wednesday.

The environment minister said that it is "hard for politicians to be adamant" when even environmental experts are uncertain about final standards for exhaust emission standards.

He was speaking at a news conference concluding a two-day closed meeting of federal and provincial environment ministers here. The conference dealt with such topics as auto emission standards, national water quality standards, industrial pollution control and the government's proposed environmental contaminants bill.

Davis said that the federal government intends to wait until the last possible moment before setting final emission standards.

The minister noted that the EPA has recently eased its standards and delayed implementation of the deadline for meeting the limits.

Automobile manufacturers in the U.S. now will have until 1976, rather than 1975, to cut carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions to 90 per cent below the standards set in 1970 — except in California. The original 1975 deadline will apply to California where air pollution is considered worse than in other states.

The EPA also has reduced requirements for control of nitrogen oxide emissions from automobiles.

"There is a game going on," Davis said. "The public is insisting on better air quality in the cities and the auto manufacturers are resisting the cost aspect insofar as it relates to automobiles."

The environment minister said he "hesitates to get in the game on the side of the auto manufacturers." He did not express his personal view.

He said the federal government is following U.S. thinking critically.

James Auld, Ontario environment minister, once more questioned whether U.S. standards should apply here.

Davis said there are some suggestions that emission standards could be different in different parts of the country. There might be a need for rigid limits in cities like Toronto, Vancouver or Montreal where heavy traffic might create a serious smog problem. But in small cities and rural areas these might be unnecessary.

He said the general feeling at the conference seemed to be that there should be a joint federal-provincial effort to establish national water quality standards.

Sidney Green, Manitoba minister of mines, resources and environmental management, said there was discussion about whether these standards should be set by the provinces working together or the federal government in consultation with the provinces.

He said he would like the standards set by the federal government after discussion with the provinces.

Silicone Treatment On Tumors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A new bloodless method of disintegrating certain cancer tumors by blocking their blood supply has been used successfully to treat a brain tumor in a 70-year-old woman, physicians at the University of California at Los Angeles report.

The blockage is accomplished by injecting silicone, the rubbery material used to enlarge women's breasts, through a small tube to the site of the rumor.

However, Dr. Robert Rand, who developed the method with Dr. James A. Mosso, noted Tuesday that only a limited number of growths — those with a well-defined blood supply — can be treated this way.

Dr. Rand said the technique is useful also in repairing aneurysms, weak spots in the walls of blood vessels where they threaten to burst. He said that in such cases, the silicone is injected on both sides of the weakness to form a patch.

A small amount of iron filings is mixed into the liquid silicone. After the liquid has been injected into the vessels near the tumor, a powerful helium-cooled electromaget pressed against the patient's body holds the mixture in place until it sets.

With the blood supply to the tumor completely sealed off, it is only a few days before the growth starts to shrink, said Dr. Rand.

In addition to the elderly woman, Dr. Rand said four other patients have had the treatment two for cancer growths and two for aneurysms. He said all have been successful, but one of the cancer patients died because the disease had spread to other parts of his body.

Grant Lost But No Panic at Project Hope

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Workers at Project Hope show no signs of panic although their Local Initiative Program grant expires at the end of this month, leaving them without funds.

The project at 508 Alpha is an orientation and counselling centre for inmates released from Vancouver Island Correctional Centre on Wilkinson Road. It opened in March, 1972.

Project Hope has received LIP grants and extensions worth $65,000.

But Manpower issued a ruling in April that on-going projects in the Victoria area where the employment situation has improved won't qualify for further LIP grants.

Project co-ordinator Sister Catherine Douglas of the Sisters of St. Ann hopes the provincial government will finance the program after May 31.

The project is an offshoot of the successful school for inmates run by Jacqueline Aubuchon and Eileen King of the Sisters of St. Ann at the Wilkinson Road jail.

They felt that released prisoners needed moral support and an organized program to help them adjust to the outside world so they wouldn't drift back to old behavior patterns.

Ex-inmates working at the centre receive salaries, moral support, counselling, and a chance to adapt gradually to the routines of the working world.

Project Co-ordinators Bernie Jorden, Sister Douglas and volunteer workers divide their time between the Alpha Street centre and the jail.

"Ideally, we meet the men while they are in jail and get to know them and their needs before they are released," Jorden said.

They hold regular Tuesday night meetings at the jail to explain the project and win inmates' confidence. Prisoners who apply before release are enrolled in a three-month orientation program during which they explore ideas that will help them on the outside.

The program includes films, counselling and psychodrama, all aimed at making the transition from jail to freedom easier for inmates.

"It takes about three weeks just to level off and get used to street life," Sister Douglas said.

During this crucial period the men need moral support and direction in channeling their energies. Sister Douglas says few newly-released inmates have the initiative to develop projects of their own but co-operate enthusiastically in programs organized for them.

Project workers put in regular shifts at Project Recycle on Borden Street and take part in recreational programs for children and other volunteer projects.

Working as volunteers allows ex-inmates to ease gradually into the routines of the working world and helps develop a sense of responsibility.

Project Hope is continually evolving because programs are tailored to individual needs. Ex-inmates and project staff meet every morning to discuss the day's activities, the use of leisure time, and opportunities for jobs and further education.

"We are looking into ways of using leisure time creatively to break the old pattern of going to pubs for relaxation," Sister Douglas said.

The project operates a school taught by Jorden, the three sisters of St. Ann and volunteer Llona O'Gorman. Students receive individual tutoring and have access to libraries at Queenswood House of Studies and the Wilkinson Road school.

The group also supports and supervises a home for newly-released men at 1029 North Park.

So far, only 14 of the 45 men who have taken part in Project Hope have returned to prison. Of these six were heroin addicts and four were alcoholics.

Sister Douglas points out that the project doesn't attempt to babysit ex-inmates. It is designed to give the men better self-knowledge and help them choose alternative life styles.

"We judge success by whether or not a man can cope better with life than he did before he joined the project," Sister Douglas said.

"The fact that he goes back to jail isn't all that important. Maybe he knows himself better and stayed out of jail longer than he would have without the project."

Warden S. A. L. Hamblin said the project is "the greatest thing we've ever had in terms of follow-up and preparing inmates for release."

Special Benefits to 1975 Holy Year

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — Pope Paul Wednesday proclaimed 1975 a holy year when the world's 600 million Roman Catholics will be able to gain special spiritual benefits.

Continuing a tradition going back to the year 1300, the Pope told his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Basilica that the theme of the holy year will be "interior renewal and reconciliation."

Holy years have been held by the church every quarter of a century since 1470. They were instituted in 1300 by Pope Boniface VIII, and the last one celebrated was in 1950.

But the Pope's announcement today included a radical departure from past practice under which holy year celebrations were exclusively focused on making a pilgrimage to Rome and visiting a set number of holy spots.

In return for this pilgrims were granted a "plenary indulgence," or full remission of punishment due for their sins.

The Pope said that the 1975 holy year will involve the entire church, not just Rome, and that individual churches in every country will be given a prominent and important role.

EXCITEMENT KILLED HOCKEY BOY, 12

EDMONTON (CP) — The excitement of a hockey game probably caused the rupture of a congenital aneurysm that caused the death of a 12-year-old player here in March.

Don Clouston died two hours after he was struck on the forehead by a puck slapped by an opposing player.

There was no external evidence on the boy's body that he had been hit by a puck, the jury was told.

Pathologist Dr. Allan Derbawka said having such an aneurysm is "like sitting on a keg of dynamite — you never know when they're going to go."

Persons with such weaknesses in the wall of the brain are particularly vulnerable during times of stress or physical strain, he said.

Pathologist Slams Baby-in-Box Case

EDMONTON (CP) — The body of three-month-old Belinda Manybears should not have been returned to her mother in the condition it was, the chief pathologist at Royal Alexandra Hospital said Wednesday.

The body of the Metis child was taken directly from the hospital by ambulance to Slave Lake, 250 road miles northwest of Edmonton, and given to Lillian Manybears, 29, in a cardboard box.

"The ambulance driver took the body straight to Mrs. Manybears and the box was opened in the living room. I think that's wrong," said Dr. Peter Davey.

He called for legislation requiring all bodies to be sent from a hospital to an undertaker before being given to the family.

Dr. Davey said the bodies of babies which have undergone autopsies at the hospital are "closed and washed and draped in a shawl," but the bodies are still an unpleasant sight.

The mother opened the box herself and said later the baby "looked like she was alive."

"Her eyes were open, her tongue was sticking out and there was a cut at the back of her head. Her nightgown had black spots all over it from where Belinda vomited."

The bodies of white people as well as native people have been shipped in boxes in Alberta, Health Minister Neil Crawford indicated Wednesday.

Mr. Crawford said one of the "undercurrents" of statements about bodies being shipped in boxes "has left the impression that only native children have been involved . . .

Ottawa Steps In

OTTAWA (CP) — The quality of federal health care for Indians and Eskimos is being questioned following revelations that the bodies of two Indian babies were shipped back to their mothers in Northern Alberta in cardboard boxes.

Indians claim free medical care from the federal government under so-called medicine chest clauses in treaties they signed.

While Ottawa appears anxious to do away with its direct role in Indian health care, such as providing federal hospitals and staff, it does pay provincial medical care premiums, giving Indians in law the same right to medical care as others in the provinces.

Operator Calls For Some Help

EDMONTON (CP) — An emergency telephone operator has made some calls for help herself — to her union and the Alberta Human Rights Commission.

Mary Kyle has been told to find a job elsewhere because she works in the same city department as her husband, a policeman. The order came from the police personnel department but it's city policy rather than police policy which dictates that Mrs. Kyle should move on.

However, an official of the Human Rights Commission told her that according to the Individual Rights Protection Act, "no employer . . . shall refuse to employ or refuse to continue to employ any person . . . because of . . . marital status."

And a member of Local 52 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said the union has been looking for just such a case as Mrs. Kyle's to oppose the city policy and lodge a grievance.

Egg Study Set

EDMONTON (CP) — A private consulting firm has been commissioned to study egg marketing in Alberta, Agriculture Minister Dr. Hugh Horner said Wednesday. The minister said he wants the consultants to evaluate the present quota system, established in 1969 to find out whether it provides for a balance between the supply and demand for eggs so that consumers are assured of reasonably-priced eggs and producers are assured a fair return for their investment.

Appeal Sought

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta College of Physicians and Surgeons will apply for permission to appeal a court decision which would reinstate Dr. G. F. Casper of nearby Sherwood Park. The college struck Casper's name from the medical register after a disciplinary hearing found him guilty of unbecoming conduct, by improperly prescribing controlled drugs. The college council did not accept Casper's explanation that he was misled by the patients involved in the case.

Schooling Hit

CALGARY (CP) — Some education programs now being used in Alberta have a detrimental effect on children, a senior Department of Education administrator told the annual meeting of the Providence Child Development Society. Dr. H. I. Hasting, said it is a myth that "any kind of schooling is better than no schooling." It was also a myth that children should be taught only by certified teachers, he said.

Labor Objectives

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Federation of Labor is writing its own Labor act for presentation to the Alberta government, president Reg Basken told delegates at the federation's annual convention today. With the help of other western provincial federations, the act would "ensure some equality in the collective bargaining process," he said. The revised Alberta Labor Act now before the legislature showed that "the vast majority of the cabinet do not understand the legitimate wishes and desires of working people," he added.

Honorary Degree

EDMONTON (CP) — The University of Alberta senate has announced that an honorary Doctor of Laws degree will be given to Maurice Strong, a leader in the movement to protect the global environment. Strong earlier served as secretary to the United Nations World Conference on the Environment.

Victim's Widow Given Apology

VANCOUVER (CP) — A longshoreman who claimed to have been drinking with one of his co-workers two days after the other man drowned April 20, has apologized to the dead man's widow.

Gordon Imlach admitted in coroner's court to having spread rumors that longshoremen Nevill Gough was still alive and well.

"I drink a lot," he told coroner Glen McDonald. "I dreamed it or thought it."

Imlach said he realized that his remarks caused an extensive investigation by the national harbours board and the longshoremen's union and raised hopes with Gough's widow that her husband was still alive.

McDonald said he should sentence Imlach for having failed to show up at the inquest earlier this month, which found that Gough drowned accidently after falling into Burrard inlet while loading a freighter at Lapointe pier.

The coroner suggested, however, that Imlach seek psychiatric treatment.

Theory Supported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial theory that resources shortages may actually threaten modern civilization won official support Wednesday from a United States government agency for the first time.

In the first comprehensive survey of U.S. mineral resources since 1952, the U.S. Geological Survey warned that "not merely U.S. affluence, but world civilization" are "in jeopardy."

The Geological Survey published a 722-page item-by-item analysis of U.S. supply and demand in 64 mineral resources and warned that many of them are, or will be, in short supply.

RESOURCES 'GIVEN AWAY'—KIERANS

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Eric Kierans, former federal cabinet minister, says the provinces are selling Canada's mineral resources at give-away prices.

He told the New Westminster branch of the Canadian Club that "we should ask our governments whether they have made the best possible deal on our resources.

"Not one province can answer that question with a yes."

Kierans, now a professor of economics at McGill University in Montreal, said Canada should begin to slow down its exploitation of non-renewable resources.

"If we could be a little more niggardly in the pace of exhausting our resources, then future generations will regard us more as statesmen rather than people seeking our own welfare first," he said.

Kierans said if Canada continues its role as supplier of raw materials to the world the gross national product will continue to rise but "we will have a higher rate of unemployment than any other country in the western world."

Bras and Boas Hide Narcotics

By JANE BRAGA

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Brazilian customs men are eyeing brassieres and boa constrictors with suspicion these days.

They are among unlikely receptacles which drug smugglers have been using to bring narcotics into this South American nation. The drug LSD is sometimes imported from the United States in women's underwear, said a state narcotics agent, Prof. Luiz Porto.

The undies are permeated with the acid which is first mixed with distilled water, then dried out and shipped to Brazil.

Brazilian distributors reverse the process on receipt of the goods, and obtain 50 to 100 micrograms of LSD per garment.

Porto said a boa constrictor recently shipped to Brazil from Peru was held by customs officials at the border.

Examination revealed that the intestines of the writhing serpent contained tubes of morphine and cocaine.

Porto, a member of the state narcotics commission, also holds the chair of pharmacology in Recife University.

Recife, a northeastern port, apart from being an entry point for LSD is a major exit for shipments of marijuana to the United States, he said.

In Recife itself, a sprawling metropolis surrounded by swampland slums, one in every 13 people consumes drugs for kicks, he said. The marijuana exported to the U.S. is all grown in the state of Pernambuco, of which Recife is the chief city.

Cocaine and morphine, which also leave for North America via Recife, originate from neighboring Peru, Uruguay and Argentina, he said.

Some of the U.S.-bound traffic goes first to Mexico, where it is transferred to helicopters for sneaking over the border to its final destination.

In the fight against the growing use of drugs, international co-operation is becoming more and more the accepted means of cutting off supplies.

Co-operation among American, Argentinian and Brazilian narcotics agents resulted in the biggest drugs haul in Latin America, last September.

Their combined efforts uncovered 130 pounds of pure heroin worth $45 million aboard a U.S. freighter in Rio harbor after a tip from a man in Buenos Aires that the ship was carrying "extra weight."

A further blow was delivered when a "Brazilian connection" was broken a month later.

A joint U.S. and Brazilian investigation turned up a smuggling ring headed by former Sicilian Mafia leader Tommaso Buscetta, including his son and six Frenchmen alleged to belong to the Corsican Mafia, as well as five Brazilians.

Porto said drug addiction is growing visibly in Brazil. In Recife alone, it had tripled since 1964.

In his laboratory at the university, he has a collection of 600 toxic plants which he has patiently classified. One of them is the jurema, a type of acacia, which he said is much in style now, either taken as a form of wine or smoked in special pipes.

Guinea Pig Role Pays Off

SEATTLE (AP) — David Cargo, 22, is a University of Washington senior in mathematics. He works as a computer operator. All perfectly normal.

In fact, he's so normal he's probably one of the most popular human guinea pigs around. In the past two years he's popped pills, smoked marijuana, swallowed lengths of rubber tubing and been poked, pinched, prodded and examined to the tune of about $500.

"It was fairly easy money," he said. "It helped pay the rent."

Another reason, he says, is curiosity. And as a fringe benefit, "for most of the past couple of years I've had one doctor or another looking over my health very, very carefully."

His first experiment was required for credit in a beginning psychology class. He was given a ball to manoeuvre through a tilting maze, estimating before each attempt how far he thought he could get the ball to go. That paid $5.

His next job was drinking dissolved sugar at 30-minute intervals over a two-hour period while researchers took blood samples to see how fast the sugar was being absorbed by his body. He got $30 for that.

But what really sold him on selling himself as a test submect was when he was paid $20 for smoking a single marijuana cigarette. The study concerned people who hadn't become high on grass before.

"They did have people in the study who had been stoned before," Cargo said. "They wanted to test whether having one person who had been stoned before affected the people smoking the dope."

Attacking 'Brazil Miracle', Agriculture Minister Quits

SAO PAULO (WP) — An important minister in President Emilio Garrastazu Medici's cabinet resigned Wednesday, attacking the economic policy that has produced "the Brazilian miracle."

Agriculture Minister Luis F. Cirne Lima made public his letter of resignation, stating that government policy "has favored industrial and commercial exporters, who are more and more likely to be foreign, producing a prosperity that is less and less Brazilian."

The resignation has no precedent on the tight ship of state run by Gen. Medici since the armed forces chose him as president in 1969. The issues raised by Cirne Lima are debated vigourously abroad, and privately within Brazil, but until now have ben raised only with trepidation in public.

Cirne Lima directly challenged Finance Minister Delfim Netto, who has directed the economy through four years of rapid growth. Brazil's annual increases in gross national product have exceeded 9 per cent—unheard of here and rare in the world.

Without naming Delfim, Cirne Lima said the finance minister's efforts to reduce further the once galloping inflation favored urban interests at the expense of the rural.

The minister also criticized alleged favoritism toward multi-national corporations. "The search for efficiency and productivity, certainly necessary, is jeopardizing the interests of the middle-sized producer . . . who is Brazilian," he said.

Cirne Lima's break with Medici was the talk of Sao Paulo newspaper circles Wednesday night, and the big question was whether government censors would allow the press to print the letter.

As agriculture minister, Cirne Lima surprised traditional interests last August by announcing a program of Agrarian reform. The proposals were modest in comparison with land redistribution in Chile or Peru, but the very intention of forcing big landowners in the overcrowded northeast to sell some land was an unexpected development.

The young minister said then that the step was necessary if agriculture was to contribute to the continuing Brazilian expansion.

Cine Lima comes from an important political family in the prosperous south of Brazil. His resignation is the first of what may be other breaks with Medici as the end of his term approaches.

Medici has sought to avoid becoming a lame duck. By the current rules, he must step down next year in favor of the man elected by the congress.

As a practical matter, Medici is believed to be sufficiently strong among among the military to chose his own successor. Cirne Lima's disorderly departure is the first indication to the contrary.

Full Talks Set On Troop Cuts

VIENNA (AP) — Representatives of the United States and the Soviet Union announced today that the first plenary session of the preparatory talks on European troop reduction will be held here next week.

The statement, read first by the U.S. and then by the Soviet representative, said representatives of the 19 states participating in the preparatory talks between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact will begin their plenary session Monday.

Although no other details were revealed, the announcement meant a breakthrough in the talks, deadlocked since they began Jan. 31, and that some kind of compromise was reached.

The sources indicated that the NATO representatives accepted the Communist demand that Hungary be given observer status only in the substantive negotiations that are expected to start in the fall. As a concession to the West, however, the Communists agreed that Hungary's position would be reconsidered once the conference starts.

11 Named Chamber Directors

Eleven men were named Wednesday by Victoria Chamber of Commerce to fill vacancies in an 18-member board of directors.

Those elected for two-year terms ending in 1975 were John Ansell, David Baird, John Chew, Ron Campion, Bill Staveley, Ken Murphy, Keith Dagg, Alan Emery and Peter Chipman.

Two named for one-year posts were Alf Pettersen and Ken McNamara.

Members returned 37.5 per cent of mailed ballots in voting for 13 candidates.

Driver Convicted In Death of Boy

Klaus Herman Hinz was convicted Wednesday of impaired driving and criminal negligence causing the death of a 15-year-old boy on the Pat Bay Highway.

Hinz, 41, of 2178 Mills, Sidney, was charged Feb. 2 following the death of Durwood Warren Freidrich, of 2075 Weiler, killed while walking along the highway.

After 2½ days of testimony in B.C. Supreme Court, a jury of nine men and three women deliberated less than two hours before returning a verdict.

Mr. Justice F. C. Munroe remanded Hinz in custody to Friday for sentence.

Evidence was that Hinz had drunk "seven or eight" beers before driving home about 7 p.m. Feb. 2.

Hinz testified he struck an object about a quarter of a mile south of Sidney, then rolled his car down an embankment.

An RCMP constable testified that a pair of glasses belonging to the Freidrich boy were found 341 feet from the body and Hinz's car.

Trash Haul In Oak Bay

Oak Bay's annual free collection of discarded household items begins Monday.

The collection route Monday will be east of St. Patrick and south of Oak Bay.

Tuesday's route is west of St. Patrick and south of Oak Bay while Wednesday the service will extend north of Oak Bay and south of Newton and Estevan.

On Thursday, May 17, the collection will run from west of Cadboro Bay and north of Estevan from Newton to Cedar Hill Cross Road.

On the final day — May 18—the route will be east of Cadboro Bay and north of Estevan, including Crestview to the northern boundary.

Rustling on Rise

WARREN, Man. (CP) — Manitoba Beef Growers, a producers' organization, says rustling is on the increase and may double this year unless police get full co-operation from ranchers.

Ken Riddell, an association director, said 500 cases of killed or stolen cattle were reported last year with losses of $150,000.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 32-year-old Langford man was sentenced to a year in prison and two more on probation by Judge William Ostler Wednesday on six charges of indecent assault against six girls between the ages of nine and 14.

Ostler said in provincial court the only thing that kept him from imposing a "very long" sentence was the fact that no force had been used in the assaults.

Court was told there was no evidence of anything but cooperation and acquiesence on the part of girls involved in the assaults.

DeWilde had kept a card index of details about the lives and activities of the girls he took out, according to earlier testimony.

The judge said a psychiatrist's report suggesting there had been no physical contact in the offences was a "most astounding statement" and a "misunderstanding."

Prosecutor John Macintyre mentioned the contact as being the forcing of a plastic cylinder into the vagina of a young girl.

★ ★ ★

An 18-year-old youth was sentenced to four months definite and six months indeterminate after court was told his parole stemming from earlier convictions had been a "complete failure."

David Pellerin of no fixed address pleaded guilty to two charges of theft and his only comment was "I did it."

On Tuesday, prosecutor John Macintyre told court Pellerin had been fined $695 in traffic court, placed on 14 months probation and told he couldn't drive again by the traffic court in March.

Pellerin was found with a typewriter, camera, tape recorder and other equipment worth a total of $484 on Monday.

Agreeing that parole had been "quite useless," Ostler said he hoped the sentence would be served in a forestry camp.

★ ★ ★

James McCrae, 25, of 1209 Bay, pleaded guilty to possession of heroin and was sentenced to six months in jail.

★ ★ ★

Allan Mortimer, 18, of 1025 Burdett, told Ostler he "borrowed and stole" to keep himself supplied with LSD and pleaded guilty on two counts of false pretences by issuing worthless cheques. He was sentenced to 18 months on probation.

PLYMOUTH CRICKET DODGE COLT

Engineered and built in Japan.
Sold and serviced by Plymouth and Dodge dealers across Canada.

Cricket and Colt may be small cars, but they're big in a lot of ways. And that includes model choice.

Both are available in coupes, hardtops, sedans, and station wagons. Plus there's a sporty new GT available in the Colt line. So if you want to go small, you can choose the little Cricket or Colt that's exactly right for you. And no matter which model you choose, you're going to get a lot of car in the bargain because that's the way the Japanese build a small economy car.

Standard equipment on Colt and Cricket includes some features that are options on big cars. Like an adjustable steering column that lets you set the steering wheel to your most comfortable driving position. And high-back bucket seats (backs recline in all models except coupe). Now if that's the way Cricket and Colt treat you and your passengers, imagine how great the rest of the features must be. Or better yet, find out for yourself at your Plymouth Cricket and Dodge Colt dealers.

Teacher 'Voice' Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The new president of the British Columbia School Trustees Association said Wednesday he will resist any move to legislate a role for teachers in policy decisions made by school boards.

Pat Walsh, 42, a Fort St. John lawyer and a school trustee from North Peace River, said in an interview he believes teachers already have "tremendous influence" and he favors increased consultation with them.

"But I fear the B.C. Teachers Federation is moving itself into a position of seeking changes in legislation to give them a voice," Walsh said, in an apparent reference to the federation's recent decision to ask the provincial government to let it bargain for improved learning and working conditions during annual salary negotiations.

"I believe such a change would be a great loss, from the point of view of the public's ability to make decisions through elected trustees. If it appeared the Public Schools Act was about to be changed in that way, I'd take a strong stand against it."

The BCSTA, which elected Walsh at the final session Wednesday of its three-day convention, Tuesday approved bargaining policies, saying learning and working conditions should continue to be set by school boards under the Public Schools Act.

Walsh said he doesn't anticipate the provincial government will move immediately on the BCSTA's request for the right for school boards to lock out teachers and for teachers to strike against boards, instead of having salary settlements decided by compulsory binding arbitration.

ANNUAL AWARD, the A. W. J. "Arch" Smith memorial plaque, for major contribution to youth leadership and career counselling is presented to Kent Macleod, right, of Pacific Ceramic Studio by T. G. Davis, a past president of the Sales and Marketing Executives of Victoria.

Cost Watching Costs $6 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — In less than five minutes Wednesday, the Commons estimates committee approved roughly $6 million for use this year and next by the auditor-general and his team to watch over government spending.

G. R. Long, assistant auditor-general, was again called on to explain whether or not the government had moved to provide him with adequate staff to audit the government books and report on time.

It had not, he said in reply to a question by Walter Baker (PC—Grenville-Carleton).

But Long said the treasury board had given the department an extra $1.2 million to cover costs in 1973-74.

Later, he said the problem running the department has never been a shortage of money. But government moves in the past to downgrade positions in the department had made it impossible to hire adequate staff to do the books and report to Parliament on time each year.

Long is filling in until newly-appointed J. J. Macdonell takes over from now-retired auditor-general Maxwell Henderson.

B.C. French Speakers Want Own School System

VANCOUVER (CP) — La Federation Des Franco-Colombiens, which represents the majority of French-speaking groups in British Columbia, said Wednesday it wants the province to set up a French public school system.

In a brief to Education Minister Eileen Dailly, the group asked for a deputy minister to represent French-speaking persons in her department.

Not only the language of instruction, but "the entire atmosphere" of certain schools must be adapted to Francophones in B.C., the brief said.

Bank Held Up

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — An armed man escaped with an estimated $25,000 to $30,000 Wednesday in a holdup at a branch of the Royal Bank here. He wore a trainman's striped hat, coveralls and dark glasses.

Tug Fined $750

VANCOUVER (CP) — The tug Sea Comet was fined $750 Wednesday for discharging an oily substance into the harbor here Dec. 26. Ronald Wilson, owner of the tug, said he had been pumping water from the bilge and did not realize it contained quantities of oil.

Search Draws Blank

VERNON (CP) — A Canadian Forces team sweeping a Second World War training range here reported Wednesday they had recovered about 200 pounds of metal but no live ammunition. The only live things the army team has found are the occasional rattlesnake, snapping turtles, and ducks. A total of 800 acres will be searched.

Two More Wanted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police Chief John Fisk said Wednsday he was seeking federal approval to hire seven law students for the summer, instead of the five suggested by Ottawa. Chief Fisk said he would prefer seven students at $500 a month instead of five students at $700 a month.

Privileges Protested

GRAND FORKS (CP)—About 30 members of the staff at Boundary Hospital here threatened Wednesday to walk off their jobs at noon Saturday to protest a decision by the hospital board to allow hospital privileges to a doctor removed from the register of the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Dr. Salaruddin Ahmad was removed from the medical register April 1 for alleged "infamous and unprofessional conduct." The college later agreed to let Dr. Ahmad continue his medical practice until an appeal against his removal from the register is heard June 11.

Trailer Plant Set

TRAIL (CP) — Carefree Design Enterprises Ltd. of Trail has received a $182,000 regional incentive grant from the federal department of regional and economic expansion to build a plant to manufacture trailers and campers. President Donald Ewing said the plant will be built at Kinnaird, 18 miles north of here and will employ 67 people in the first year.

Anglicans Look North

REGINA (CP) — The Anglican Church of Canada formally received a plan Wednesday for union with two other churches, declared its intention to establish a self-determining church in the North and said it will continue to aid churches in the developing countries.

Lengthy debate on the North delayed several other resolutions scheduled to come before the general synod.

Those resolutions — including support for native people in their fight against the James Bay hydroelectric development project in Northern Quebec, a boycott of French goods in protest against France's continuing atmospheric nuclear testing and halting trade relations with South Africa — were to be dealt with today or Friday, last day of the synod.

Debate on the North centred on membership of a primate's council charged with the responsibility to develop a self-determining branch in the North by 1982.

Debate on the North left time enough for debate on only one other resolution. This resolution, reaffirming a principle that the Canadian church will continue to help those who need help wherever they are, was approved overwhelmingly.

However, in view of the church's financial problems — the church had a deficit of $250 million last year — the resolution includes a clause that the Canadian church will help other churches only when "the flow of cash permits."

SUDHA REDDY

Wife Expecting, Indian Deported

MONTREAL (CP) — Sudha Reddy, 18, seven months pregnant and desperately alone, sobbed openly Wednesday in her small apartment.

Mallappa Reddy, 29, her husband, came to Canada about 1½ years ago from the southern Indian state of Bangalore.

Declared an illegal immigrant, he was deported Tuesday night.

He has faced deportation charges ever since his arrival although he is a university-trained electronics engineer, and fluent in English.

Last Feb. 26, he was ordered deported by the Montreal Federal Court of Appeal. An appeal on April 18 was rejected.

Reddy's lawyer, S. J. Smiley, attempted to appeal the case to the Supreme Court of Canada.

His lawyer said the deportation Tuesday was premature and an appeal process will continue with Reddy's absence.

Smiley said any person whose appeal is turned down has the right to appeal to the Supreme Court within 60 days. Reddy had 54 days remaining.

Some of Reddy's friends, who asked that their names be withheld, said he could not understand why he was being deported.

Reddy landed in Halifax when he came to Canada, they said, and was immediately detained by immigration officials who did not believe he had bona fide visitor's status.

They said he found some Indian names in the local telephone book and befriended several families who posted his bail.

He came to Montreal where he has been faced with immigration hearings until he was deported. On Sept. 26 his wife joined him in Montreal.

Wage Decision Appealed

A provincial court decision, dismissing a claim for damages against the former employer of Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau director John Woods, will be appealed, lawyer Douglas Christie said Wednesday.

Woods claimed $400 damages (one month's wage) against Slegg Bros. Lumber Ltd. and Henry Hudson Apartments Ltd. March 28 after Slegg Bros. sold the apartment building at the end of October.

Woods' position as property manager for Henry Hudson Apartments Ltd. terminated at the time of the sale and Woods claimed Slegg Bros. failed to give him a month's notice.

Judge D. G. Ashby dismissed the case April 3 on the grounds that Woods was paid by the new owner and suffered no loss of money or position.

No date has been set for appeal, Christie said.

The Polaroid Camera Girl will be in our store this weekend to show you a wonderful gift idea. Come in and see the complete line of Polaroid instant picture cameras. There's one to suit every need and budget.

The Model 420 is the most economical of Polaroid's folding cameras. Uses the Focused Flash system. A set of louvers open and close in front of the flashcube to let out the right amount of light. It's automatic as you focus. Electric eye and electronic shutter for all other shots.

The Model 430 has a built-in mechanical timer that "Buzzes" until your picture's ready, and accepts optional UV and cloud filters.

The Model 440 lets you take indoor black and white shots without flash, has four exposure ranges and accepts all optional accessories.

The Model 450 is the finest camera in the 400 line. It features a built-in electronic timer that "Beeps" when your picture's ready, and has a deluxe metal body with brushed chrome finish.

Good Listeners on Crisis Line

NEED Gets More Than 1,000 Calls a Month to 'Just Talk'

By WAYNE HARDING
Times Staff

"Just talk" meets one of the needs of the increasing number of people who phone NEED, Victoria's crisis line.

The voluntary agency, two years old today, receives more than 1,000 calls a month from people who want to talk about a variety of personal problems — including people whose personal problem is simply that they don't have anyone to talk to.

"We're not simply a suicide prevention line, although that is part of our function," says volunteer David Dunsmuir.

"But suicides are sort of a grabby idea, so people seem to like to think of us in those terms," he admits.

(The Salvation Army's suicide prevention line was already in operation when NEED was formed. Calls to that number are redirected to NEED after the Salvation Army office closes at nights.)

"Actually, only maybe one per cent of the calls involve either contemplated suicide or cases where the suicide is already in progress," says Dunsmuir.

"We call ourselves a crisis line. But what's a crisis?"

It may be a man not able to sleep because he's worrying about his job. It may be a 16-year-old girl who is pregnant and unable to tell her parents. It may be someone with a drug or liquor problem. ("Drugs turn out not to be as big a problem as you'd expect," says Dunsmuir.)

And then there are the callers who just want to make contact, to hear another voice.

In all cases, the volunteers who man the phones "listen and respond to anonymous callers, hear them out without judgment or criticism."

"We're not caseworkers with a lot of expertise," Dunsmuir says of the 70 volunteer "listeners."

They are people from a cross-section of the community — although young people and university students predominate — who work in teams of twos in four-hour or eight-hour shifts around the clock.

Before they get on the line they have been screened by a panel of professionals who assess their ability to handle the circumstances that might come up and their responsiveness to those who call. They also go through training and probationary periods.

They seek to help their callers "face situations realistically." But they are reluctant to give specific advice other than to refer people to agencies who can help them if that is needed. In emergencies they will take emergency action.

And why do they do it?

"Sure, I admit I find it rewarding to honestly be able to offer help," Dunsmuir replies.

"Sure, we get a lot out of it, too."

Prairies 'Bugged'

OTTAWA (CP) — Grasshoppers have replaced drought as the prime threat to Prairie crops this year. Statistics Canada reported Wednesday that the grain belt is faced with its "most serious threat from grasshoppers in many years."

Recent rains, however, have eased earlier concerns that drought would pinch production when grain and food prices are soaring in response to world shortages.

The statistics bureau said in its first of six reports on crop conditions across the country and the first of 11 dealing with the Prairies that western moisture conditions have improved greatly following rains in late April and early May.

But the mild winter has also helped the grasshopper hatch.

11-Hour Lag On Stardust

The late hour of the freighter Irish Stardust's collision with a reef near Alert Bay prevented word of the incident from reaching senior government officials until 11 hours later, Victoria provincial court was told Wednesday.

Judge William Ostler expressed some surprise when Bull Harbor radio operator Michael Redding told the court he did not send out copies of Irish Stardust's radioed predicament to coast guard and other departments because Redding's superior was asleep.

"Do you have standing orders" on how to deal with apparent emergencies, Ostler asked Redding, who said he had worked at Bull Harbor for 10 months.

NOT TOLD

"I have not been told about them or anything," Redding replied.

He said he prepared messages, as instructed in his manuals, but held them for approval by his superior, who was asleep.

"I did as soon as I thought he would be awake."

Ostler observed: "An emergency depends on whether he's awake . . ."

James Caird, master of the Irish Stardust, is being tried on a charge of failing to report discharge of oil from his ship.

Radio operators at Bull Harbor and Alert Bay explained from the witness stand that the Irish Stardust sent two messages to its home office in Ireland reporting damage to its hull. The messages came through within 1½ hours after midnight — the morning of Jan. 25, 1973.

The first message for Irish Ships in Dublin came from the Irish Stardust at 12:39 a.m. It read: "Struck Haddington Island in Broughton Strait under pilot at 2300 24th. Damage 4 and 5 (oil tanks). Proceeding to Victoria for drydocking as advised by Anglo. Master."

The second message was relayed to Bull Harbor at 1:28 a.m. "Complete foreside damaged. Forepeak through to No. 5 (oil tank). Vessel under control. ETA Victoria 1500 Jan. 25. Master."

Copies of the messages were not sent to coast guard and other Canadian government officials until "around 10 o'clock," according to John Keenan, whose radio shift at Bull Harbor followed Redding's.

Thus the time lag between the Irish Stardust's grounding and official notice in Vancouver amounted to about 11 hours.

Other testimony claimed that pollution control officers were not aware of the oil spill until after the 8 a.m. to noon shift began.

NO REQUEST

Prosecutor Dermod Owen-Flood asked each radio operator if the ship or its master requested notification of a pollution control officer or a steamship officer, and each reply was in the negative.

Defence counsel Peter Lowry asked Redding if he thought the Irish Star was a deep sea vessel.

Redding replied "I don't know anything about ships."

He said he called his superior, David Macmillan, at 7:45 a.m.

Redding told the court: "I waited for the TSM (superior officer) because I was fairly new on the job."

Refit Damage Report 'Secret'

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government refused Wednesday to release the report of an inquiry into the refit of the Canadian destroyer Restigouche.

Defence Minister James Richardson said in the Commons the report is considered "internal departmental memoranda" and as such will not be made public.

He asked Manitoba New Democrat Doug Rowland to withdraw a motion calling for the report to be tabled. Rowland refused and the motion was transferred to a long list of similar motions awaiting debate.

The MP, who suggested earlier that deliberate damage occurred during the refit at a Halifax shipyard, said Wednesday he has been informed that intentional damage pushed the cost roughly $1 million above the $12 million cost of the original refit.

Earlier, he described the inquiry, carried out by the armed forces, as a somewhat unusual step.

The destroyer was reported damaged last August, during trials off Halifax, when corrosion was found in the ship's turbine feedwater supply system.

Decision Reserved On P.O. Picketing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Decision was reserved Wednesday on a request for an injunction against picketing at the Vancouver Post Office and other post offices in British Columbia.

Members of the Teamsters Union last week picketed the post office to protest a delivery contract which had been given to a non-union firm, Ponderosa Trucking of Mission.

A temporary injunction granted last week expired Monday.

On Wednesday, the attorney-general of Canada, through the regional federal justice department, sought to renew it. Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of the B.C. Supreme Court reserved his decision.

Ray Cocking, representing the Teamsters, said the union would not mount a picket line, pending the outcome of the application.

Useless Heiress Cries in Court

LONDON (CP) — A beautiful young heiress and former debutante sobbed in court as she was given an unusually severe dressing-down by a justice who termed her "a useless member of the community."

Jayne Christina Harries, 22, pleaded guilty to possession of cannabis and then collapsed in tears when told she would have to spend overnight in jail.

Spring in Japan And Kids Escape

TOKYO (Reuter) — With the beginning of spring, police at Tokyo's main railway terminals hunt the platforms in search of runaways who invariably flock to the capital at this time of year.

From long experience, police have established special posts at the four main stations to spot runaways and try to persuade them to return home.

A police spokesman explains that at springtime there is always a sudden surge of runaways because of the change in the weather.

There is also a large migration of the young away from home in September after enjoying a taste of freedom during their summer vacations.

In 1971, a total of 97,035 youths were reported to police as having run away from their homes. Nearly all—96,170—were located. The 1972 national figures are still being compiled.

Tokyo police say 11,069 runaways were located in the capital in 1971 and 10,307 last year.

But although the over-all figure decreased in 1972, the number of runaways under 14 years of age increased to 1,175 from 1,058.

Police say the season determines the type of child seeking freedom. In winter those who leave home generally prepare well in advance. Often a search of their room reveals a list of every conceivable item they will need for their trip.

The motives of those who run off in the spring are often not clear. Some urban youths seek a carefree vagabond life wandering around the countryside, particularly on the undeveloped island of Hokkaido in the north.

Generally when their money runs out they return home. But police say this group is the most likely to commit a crime when short of ready cash.

The development of cheap and fast transport spanning Japan is cited as oone reason young people are encouraged to leave home.

The development of the information media, providing detailed information of urban life, is also blamed for encouraging rural youths to head for the city.

Sociologists also blame the deterioration of family relationships in the ptst-war era in which the father no longer exerts an all-powerful influence to maintain discipline.

Another reason is the reluctance of some young Japanese to conform to the rigid pattern of life dictated by attending the right schools and moving off to a company in which promotion is determined by seniority.

Among other factors is the ambitious mother who forces her offspring to undergo the "examination hell" to ensure progress through the right primary school up to the university, still the passport to the best jobs in the country.

Sociologists are detecting signs that Japanese youths are beginning to find there is much more to life than the pattern dictated by decades and centuries of tradition.

This contributes to a remarkable two-way flow passing on adjacent railway lines —disillusioned city youths seeking tranquillity and a simpler life in the country and rural youths heading for the glamor and better opportunities in the city.

Neck Broken, Survivor Lasts Four Days

OTTAWA (CP) — "The first thing I realized upon gaining consciousness was that I was the only survivor."

This is how Brian Fraser of Ottawa told the story Wednesday of his escape from death.

He was the only survivor of an aircraft occupied by three persons that struck a hill near Thurso, Que., last Wednesday night. He spent four days in the wilderness waiting for rescue.

Mr. Fraser, 26, spoke in a feeble voice from his hospital bed. His neck was broken in the crash.

Edwin Hamilton, 50, and Anna Ritchie, 22, both of the Ottawa area, were killed in the crash. The aircraft was returning to Carp, Ont., about 20 miles west of here, from Montreal.

"It was raining, but we had about four miles visibility. I can't remember too much of what happened before the crash.

"There wasn't a lot I could do after the crash . . . I tried to keep myself dry and covered myself with a piece of the tail section," he said.

KILLER DRUG FROM CANADA

WASHINGTON (CP) — An illicit drug which surfaced in Canada last month has since been blamed for at least seven deaths there and 11 in the United States, the director of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs has warned.

John E. Ingersoll said in a statement that "in view of reports we have received this past week, this new drug should be considered extremely dangerous."

The drug is a member of the amphetamine family — methaxyamphetamine — and has apparently been sold in some southern and midwestern states as the more familiar drug-culture product MDA — methylenedioxy-amphetamine.

Ingersoll said it is sold as an amber or off-white powder in foil packets or gelatine capsules. It is believed to cause hallucinations and stimulation similar to amphetamine or its derivatives.

In laboratory tests with animals, the bureau said, the drug has proved to be 30 per cent more lethal than amphetamines.

An Honest Face Fraud's Fortune

TORONTO (CP) — Rick Carter figures that "being cursed with an honest face" accounted for some of his problems.

"It made a life of fraud so much easier to follow," he explained.

Now, he divides his time between helping others with their problems and serving the balance of an eight-year sentence for fraud, forgery and false pretences in excess of $100,000.

During the week Carter, 32, is director of Operation Springboard, a non-profit organization which helps prisoners, former prisoners and their families.

Every weekend he returns to prison.

"Licensed as an electrician and an oil burner mechanic, I made darn good pay," he said. "Such work, however, offered no challenge. The only motivation was money."

The money, he said, went on new cars, clothes and travel.

"Crime was the only way I could continue with that lifestyle," said Carter. "Someone once told me that I would make a great salesman because I had an honest face. An honest face, I reasoned, would help me in passing bad cheques.

"It was so easy that I decided this was the way to go. And so it was, until they caught up with me just before Christmas in 1967.

"I was living high in a hotel in New Brunswick when the police picked me up. They checked me out with Toronto and found I was wanted there on a lot of charges. Those charges stuck quite well."

ENJOYS JOB

Carter, released on day parole in September to work for Operation Springboard, now makes about one-third of what he could earn working as an electrician.

"My pay is $81.25 a week and my hours are from 8 a.m. to around 1 in the next morning. Still, I've never been happier."

The three founders of the organization, Carter, Ed Laboucaine and Don Bailey were prisoners together during 1969.

Bailey, the first to be released and credited by Carter with doing the initial leg work for Operation Springboard, now is executive director of three half-way houses sponsored by the United Church in Winnipeg. Laboucaine has since become director of Community Parole.

All three men were divorced while in prison Carter said, and part of Operation Springboard's work is in providing transport for wives and relatives to visit prisons.

"Letters are not enough, but a visit every two or three weeks can be sufficient to preserve the tie. Last year we transported 1,647 relatives and friends as visitors to federal prisons."

OBTAINED AUTO

Key to the service was a $5,000 grant from the Atkinson Foundation of Toronto last September to buy a station wagon.

Five runs are made a week from Toronto to prisons in the Kingston, Ont., area and one to Warkworth penitentiary near Campbellford, Ont., for a weekly total of more than 2,000 miles.

Until this service opened up there was nothing for the families of men inside," said Carter. "Someone once called our station wagon a therapeutic community on wheels. The wives get talking and the problems are ironed out or eased."

Carter's operation has a staff of 12, four of whom are former prisoners, plus a wife whoes husband was formerly in prison. All do counselling work, emphasizing the practical.

A woman taking a course in criminology recently volunteered help, stressing her ability to "get down to the inmate level." The offer was rejected.

"She went out of here madder than hell," Carter said. "What is the inmate level anyway? I must have done time with around 3,000 different guys and they ranged from the illiterate to men with college degrees."

U.S. Stays Extradition

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Court of Appeals has granted a stay of extradition to Hermine Braunstifer Ryan, wanted in West Germany to stand trial for atrocities committed during the Second World War.

Mrs. Ryan, accused of sending more than 1,000 Jews to their deaths for Hitler's Reich, signed a consent decree in 1971 giving up her American citizenship, but now claims the decree was obtained by fraud.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

When Little Things Build Up...

One day a prominent physician in New York City telephoned me saying he was sending me a patient with the most distressing and incurable case of migraine he had ever seen.

My associates at the Mayo Clinic examined her thoroughly, and as almost always happens with migrainous people, found nothing organically wrong with her. What indicated to me that there must be serious trouble in her home was that during the 10 days she spent at the clinic, she was free of her crippling headaches. So I asked her, "What distresses you greatly at home?"

But as so commonly happens, she said, "I don't know. I have a devoted husband and a beautiful home. We have all the money we need, and there is no reason for me to feel unhappy."

Finally, I said, "If I could be in your home for an hour, I could probably tell you what causes your headache." And she said, "All right, the next time you are in New York, run up to Connecticut and visit me."

When I did that, I quickly saw what the trouble was. First, as we sat down to tea, the maid gave me my tea on a doily that was upside down, and she was much disturbed about that. Then, in came her mother-in-law, gorgeously dressed, and instantly I sensed that much of my patient's distress could be from living with this older woman.

Later, in came a 14-year-old son, who sat at the piano and played jazz.

Finally, in came the husband, who kissed his mother and fussed only over her, ignoring his wife. He quickly showed his dissatisfaction with his son.

The last straw came when the husband announced that he had invited two important New York lawyers to dinner at that house that evening, and I saw my patient shudder. It was very clear what were the pressures and tensions that were causing her migraine headaches.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

KNIT & CHAT

By LOIS HOLMES

The handsome matching afghan and rug shown today can be made exactly the desired size by just adding squares. In addition to this, they can be made up totally from leftovers (from other projects) which give an early American patchwork look.

If specific decor colors are needed, a few skeins can be purchased at a time to make it even easier on the budget. Directions also include a smart pillow and a set of place mats in a smaller matching square. All items are made of inexpensive four-ply or bulky yarns in single strands or more.

To order: CR-801 Add-A-Square Group (afghan, rug, place mat and pillow), send $1.50 in U.S. funds plus 15 cents for mailing for the pattern (25 cents for air mail) in currency, check or money order to Lois Holmes of California, Victoria Times, Box 1005, Gardena, Calif. 90249.

Please print your name, address, and pattern number plainly. Allow three weeks for delivery.

Seeds Arrive Late? Don't Despair

The gift seeds distributed annually to members of the Royal Horticultural Society of London, England were late coming this year making it necessary to figure an easy way to deal with them, yet anticipating good germination results.

Noticing the difference in size between seeds of Rhododendron and Tree Peony, it suddenly became clear that some gardeners might have trouble if all the seeds they receive from this source are sown in one container at the same level or depth.

Another point is that certain seeds germinate best when sown as soon as ripened, that is, in fall. Obviously, with a world-wide distribution scheme such as the RHS undertakes, some seeds we receive are from the previous year's harvest. However, this does not make them impossible to germinate. The seeds in their sowing mixture should be kept just damp outdoors until the following spring, when germination is quite possible.

Seeds gathered from the majority of named varieties among cultivated plants provide the plantsman-gardener with years of interest. We never know what treasure may turn up, nor how many will have to be turned into the compost heap.

With trees and shrubs, the growing period may be eight or 10 years, but the waiting is full of expectancy. As flower buds are finally formed and flowering time approaches, the frequent visits to the plants become more numerous until one day — there is a flower open, perhaps of a kind we have never seen before.

To get back to disappointments from seed sowing: The seeds of Tree Peony are each as large as my little fingernail. There are three of them, so each go a half inch down in three small containers.

If they don't germinate this spring, they will remain there, kept damp, for the whole year — if the seeds are found to be still firm. They seem very hard now.

Magnolia seeds are medium in size, so they are covered with a quarter inch of soil mixture. Seeds of two tulip species which I like quite well, are large enough to have five of each; these are a quarter inch below soil level.

Other tree and shrub species are represented by two, four or six seeds of each, but I expect at least one of each genus to grow for me to a "seeable" size. These I have covered with a quarter inch of the sand, soil and peat mixture.

The Rhodo seed is as fine as dust, so it is sown on the surface of damp peat, with sand below for drainage.

No covering is given, but I gently press with finger tips to make contact between seed and peat. Germination will look like fine, pale green moss until tiny leaves finally take shape.

This year I'm using a miniature plastic domed greenhouse unit so it can be moved around indoors and out according to need. It has a simple ventilating device for later use; a plastic tray below for controlled moisture supply when seedlings begin to grow.

In the meantime, with several kinds under the one dome, I check each day for possible germination.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

I imagine that the reader, after observing what happened in today's deal, will find it rather difficult to believe that it was played in a World Championship. But the fact is that it was, in the match between Norway and the United States in 1970. Sitting North-South was the United States. The Norwegian team was occupying the East-West seats. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ Q J 10 9 4
♡ Q 4
◇ K 7 3

WEST
♠ K 6 5 3
♡ A 8
◇ Q

EAST
♠ 7
♡ K J 7 6 5 3
◇ 10 5 4 2
♣ 4 3

SOUTH
♠ A 8 2
♡ 10 9 2
◇ A J 9 8 6
♣ J 9

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	2 ♣
Pass	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

Before the reader points out that it was not East's turn to lead, let me state that East did lead the four of clubs — out of turn! According to law, declarer now had no fewer than four options available to him, one of which was to allow the illegal lead to stand as a legal lead. That is, declarer could accept the lead, which would mean that to this trick South would play second, West third, and dummy fourth.

Had declarer applied "Goldwater's Law" of accepting the lead, it is conceivable — although not very likely — that he might have made his contract (if West took the ace and continued clubs). But South chose to prohibit the club lead, in view of his own club holding (South was not allowed to look at the dummy-to-be before playing out of his own hand). So the opening lead reverted to West, South forbidding the club lead.

West, not knowing which of the unbid suits to lead, elected to open the ace of hearts as a lesser-of-evils lead. He then continued with his remaining heart, and East took five more heart tricks. A spade shift was then made, and West cashed the spade king and club ace, to hand declarer a vulnerable four-trick set. In summary, all one can say is that if the bidding were a crime, then the punishment fitted the crime.

"Goldwater's Law," incidentally, is the brain-child of Harry Goldwater, a national director of the American Contract Bridge League. It says that when a defender leads out of turn, declarer should exercise the option of accepting the lead. The theory behind the acceptance is that if the errant defender is not sufficiently on the ball to know whose lead it is, he is hardly likely to have found the most effective one (for his side) in making his out-of-turn lead.

TOILETS TREASURES

YORK, England (CP) — Even in Roman times, it seems, valuables were lost down the toilet. Archeologists exploring a Roman sewer below this Yorkshire city uncovered from the silt three solid gold trinkets. The finds are now on show at a local museum.

U.S. Would Expel Canada

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The United States is trying to expell Canadian fishboats from American waters on both the East and West Coasts, Fisheries Minister Jack Davies charged Wednesday.

His comments came after Cliff Levelton, director-general of fisheries operations for Canada, announced the collapse of Canada-United States treaty talks in Seattle.

Levelton said he gave formal 60-day notice Tuesday to the U.S. that Canada will extend salmon net fishing to the 12-mile limit and lengthen the trolling season to give Canadian fishermen a bigger share of the Pacific catch.

One of the Canadian changes will allow Canadian vessels that net salmon off the west coast of Vancouver Island to operate out to the 12-mile limit. At present such craft can fish only within headland-to-headland lines drawn across the mouths of bays and inlets.

Levelton said the talks broke down because Canada wanted to cut the U.S. share of Fraser River sockey and pink salmon to one-quarter from the one-half set out in the 1937 International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Treaty.

"Talks just bogged down," Levelton said. "We are being treated unfairly, yet there was no attempt by the Americans to reach accommodation in a moderate way."

He said the Canadian mission, which he led, proposed an interim solution, but this also was rejected.

It suggested that each country reduce by five per

Mitchell, Stans Facing Charges

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Former Nixon cabinet members John Mitchell and Maurice Stans were indicted today on charges they sought to obstruct an investigation by a federal agency in exchange for a secret $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon re-election campaign.

The federal grand jury also indicted financier Robert Vesco, who made the contribution, and Harry Sears, a former republican leader of the New Jersey senate, who testified earlier he delivered the money to Stans in Washington.

Mitchell, former attorney general, and Stans, former secretary of commerce, has earlier testified before the grand jury investigating the contribution by Vesco to the Nixon campaign.

Vesco left the country while the matter was under investigation. Mitchell at the time said he testified "fully, frankly and freely."

Vesco, 37, was under federal investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission at the time the money changed hands. He and 41 others had been accused in a civil suit by the SEC with milking four foreign mutual funds of $224 million and is now believed to be in Costa Rica.

Former White House counsel John Dean, meanwhile, claimed today that "there is a concerted effort to get me" and vowed again that he would not take the blame for other top administration officials in the Watergate scandal. He will testify before a Senate committee investigating the affair, Friday.

Dean's statement followed a series of reports about him — some saying he was prepared to link Nixon to bugging cover-up efforts and some saying both government and senate investigators had concluded that Dean had no such evidence.

In his statement, Dean said the information contained in unspecified news stories was "neither complete nor accurate," but declared that "truth will emerge" ultimately in the Watergate case.

"Efforts have been made to prevent me from obtaining relevant information and records; attempts have been made to influence the handling of my testimony by the prosecutors; restrictions have been placed on the scope of my testimony as it relates to the White House; and blatant efforts have been made to publicly intimidate me," Dean said.

CONSUMERS 'SPOILED'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has accused price-conscious consumers of being "spoiled" by low food costs.

"I know consumers are angry about rising food prices," he said in a speech to the Ottawa-Carleton Liberal Association, "the fact of the matter is that consumers have been spoiled by the low food prices we have been enjoying for more than 20 years."

Consumers have been spending less and less of their income on food, while receiving higher and higher quality and built-in convenience."

Whelan, a southwestern Ontario farmer, has been the Liberal cabinet's most vociferous spokesman at a time when consumer groups have organized to boycott products in an effort to curb rising costs.

But Prime Minister Trudeau has said the minister is merely speaking his own mind when he comments on the subject.

Whelan said Wednesday that improved farm efficiency has made the "slow rate of price increase" for food possible. But poor weather last year cut into production, particularly in the east, and prices moved up accordingly.

World droughts last year, rising demand for red meat and a poor fish catch off Peru this year also contributed to increased costs. Fish is used for protein in livestock feed.

To offset increases, Whelan again called for all-out farm production and ambitious marketing efforts by the government.

New Crisis Facing Dollar

LONDON (UPI) — Rumblings of a possible new international money crisis developing in European markets again brought the U.S. dollar under pressure today.

The price of gold continued its ominous rise and banks and dealers said the movements were almost carbon copies of preludes to previous crises.

The run on the dollar began Wednesday with a strengthening of the West German mark, occasioned by reports that Bonn intended to revalue its currency and take fresh counter-inflation measures. The rumors were denied later in the day.

"In March there was only a rumor of a new dollar devaluation. Now there are renewed fears following the Watergate affair and the looming crisis in the Middle East," a top money man said here today.

The pound continued strong, selling against the U.S. dollar at $2.50735. By mid-day it moved to another peak of $2.50875.

Gold in London touched a new peak fixing of $94.60, up $1.60 from Wednesday's close.

"There was no real sign of a recovery in the dollar, but the weakness may be cushioned by the Thursday settlement factors that usually aid U.S. currency," one foreign dealer said.

The dollar rallied a little in Frankfurt, changing hands at 2.8355 marks.

In Bonn, the government today proposed heavy new taxes on income and investment and further liberalization of imports as part of a frontal attack on a boom that is pushing prices up at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent.

Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt and Economics Minister Hans Friderichs told a news conference the cabinet approved the 21-point package of anti-inflationary measures at an after-dinner session Wednesday night.

"The main purpose of this program is to reduce purchasing power and liquidity and pressure on prices, which therefore should end anticipation of price rises in wage negotiations," Friderichs said.

ICCS Going Broke

Times News Services

SAIGON — The peace supervisory force in Vietnam is in danger of losing some of its essential services unless it receives a new injection of capital soon to pay private contractors.

The commission requested additional financial support about two weeks ago from the four parties to the Paris peace agreement sources said today. But so far no replies have been received and resources are rapidly running out.

The commission has already received initial payments of about $1 million from each of the parties.

However, the ICCS has been unable, for a variety of reasons, to draw up a firm operating budget which would set out specific requirements. Therefore, it has asked for a matching payment to the initial one.

One ICCS source commented that "since the four parties seem to want us here, it's a little puzzling there has been no action."

Meanwhile, private contractors who supply most of the basic services for the ICCS are becoming extremely reluctant to continue their operations without payment.

The old International Control Commission had a dismal credit record, resulting at one time in companies cutting off water supplies to the Canadian delegation.

Many local firms seem to fear that the ICCS is following the same trend.

Meanwhile, military sources said today in Phnom Penh Communists had shifted the brunt of their offensive Wednesday from there to the northern part of the country.

Fierce fighting both north and south of the capital claimed heavy casualties, however.

Border War Rages On

United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas attacked Lebanese army posts at a half dozen points along the 150-mile Syrian -Lebanese border today, and Tel Aviv dispatches said Israel had sent a brigade of battle-hardened troops to the occupied Golan Heights near the battle area as a "routine summer training exercise."

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv refused to say how long the exercises had been planned.

They involve planes, tanks, artillery and helicopters. Censorship prohibits disclosure of how many men are in the brigade.

Arab leaders, meanwhile, conferred in Beirut and other capitals on ways to preserve the third Lebanese ceasefire in eight days of fighting between guerrillas and the army.

There was scattered shooting in Beirut today but military leaders lifted the 24-hour curfew twice to let residents buy food.

Evidence of big power fears of worsening Middle East situation also came from Beirut where Soviet Ambassador Servar Azimov conferred minutes with president Suleiman Franjieh during which Beirut radio said he delivered an oral message from the Kremlin leaders.

Contents of the message were not disclosed but both U.S. and Soviet diplomatic sources have expressed hope there would be no major explosion before the summit conference this summer between President Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev.

Diplomatic sources in London reported earlier this week that the United States had made similar representations to Israel.

U.S. Steel Price Up

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The U.S. Steel Corp. today announced a 4.8 per cent price increase on its sheet and strip products which are widely used in the production of automobiles and household appliances.

Other producers were expected to follow U.S. Steel's lead.

The United States' largest steelmaker said the increases would become effective with shipments of June 15. The price hikes were well within the limits established by the economic stabilization program, it said.

U.S. Steel said prices also will be increased effective Aug. 1 on electric resistance weld trunk-line pipe and submerged arc weld pipe, both widely used by the oil industry.

NEWS BRIEFS

Kaiser Purchase

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Mitsubishi Corp. and its Japanese coal customers today announced a planned investment of $27.5 million to purchase more than seven million shares of Kaiser Resources Ltd. at $3.80 a share.

World Court Bid

THE HAGUE (UPI) — Australia and New Zealand filed suits Wednesday in the International Court of Justice in an effort to stop France from carrying out more nuclear tests in the Pacific. The suit said France violates international law and the United Nations by continuing the tests.

4,000 Deported

OTTAWA (CP) — An estimated 4,000 visitors were ordered deported during 1972, the Commons was told Wednesday in a written response to a question by Steve Paprowski (PC—Edmonton centre). No precise figures were available, the government said. There were 11,875 people awaiting deportation hearings by the immigration appeal board at the end of December.

Two Kidnapped

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — An 11-year-old boy and a 20-year-old man were kidnapped here today, the first such incidents since the military government imposed a death penalty for abductions under the martial law declared May 1. The new cases were the 38th and 39th reported in Argentina this year.

Lull Broken

BELFAST (UPI) — The army said gunmen shot and killed a part-time soldier in an ambush at the end of a country lane today, Northern Ireland's first death in secular violence in nearly a week. The killings, and Ulster's 3001st bomb blast that injured a mother and her four children in Protestant - Catholic rioting during the night, broke a four-day lull that began after three British soldiers were killed Saturday in booby-trap explosions.

Borrowers Booked

PHOENIX, Ariz. (Reuter) — During the past six months, 133 persons have been arrested and five jailed for failing to return overdue books or pay library fines. Librarian R. W. Henderson says the law which permits the arrests and also makes book stealing a criminal offence punishable by six months in jail, is effective.

Canada Comes First

Times News Services

TORONTO — Canadian oil companies say they won't export extra gasoline to the fuel-hungry United States until they are sure Canadian customers have enough.

Imperial Oil Ltd., a subsidiary of Exxon in the U.S., said it has been "barraged" with requests for gasoline from dealers south of the border.

"We haven't had much surplus lately anyway and that is the only gasoline we would consider exporting," a spokesman said Wednesday.

The company's last sale of gasoline to the U.S. was a surplus one million gallons from the Winnipeg refinery in January, he said.

U.S. oil companies have said they expect gasoline shortages in some parts of the country this summer.

Any shortages in Canada this summer will likely hit independent, not name-brand dealers, he said.

However, Lawrence Woodruff, president of CFM Ltd., Toronto, said present gasoline supplies are tighter than usual. CFM, a jobber, buys surplus gasoline from refineries and sells it to independents.

"I think there will be a squeeze on the independents and I think some marginal ones will have to close because they never should have been

DINNER STACKED

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time in years, President Nixon drew less than a million-dollar gate Wednesday night, when he spoke at a Republican fund-raising dinner at the Washington Hilton hotel.

Surveying a $1,000-a-plate audience of 1,500 — more than one-third of them freeloaders — Nixon said:

"I shall always remember this group tonight — remember that when the going was tough, you hung in there."

Making his first major public appearance since the Watergate scandal triggered a series of top-level resignations from his administration, Nixon told the faithful: "I don't stand here tonight as a loser. We are winners."

He promised to make the next four years "better than the last four."

Sponsors said the event would gross about $750,000 and net perhaps $600,000.

Two years ago at a similar dinner, the receipts totalled about $1.5 million. Last September, a nation-wide set of Republican banquets, linked by closed-circuit television, grossed over $6 million for a single Nixon speech.

Dealer May Be Their Only Firenza

Owners of Firenzas, the trouble-ridden cars imported by General Motors, will probably get compensation from car dealers before they get it from the manufacturer, according to Michael Hanson, provincial consumer affairs director.

"Anyone who has followed the case will see that, so far, the people who have got satisfaction (in unloading their cars) have got it from the dealers," he told a meeting of the Grace McInnes NDP Club Wednesday.

He said he has "no doubt there will be court action before this thing is settled."

And, he said, he expected the provincial Sale of Goods Act would be the legislation which would apply.

Under this well-tested act, it is the seller who must assume primary responsibility for the quality of the goods he sells. The seller in turn, of course, would have recourse against the firm that sold him the product.

Hanson noted that recent amendment to the Sale of Goods Act prevented sellers from waiving their primary responsibility through the manufacturers' warranty.

Hanson told the meeting if the market of supply and demand has been upset, it is the fault of both consumers and merchants.

"Shopping in just one or two shops, rather than shopping around for the best buy in each item, clearly destroys the concept of the market of supply and demand," he said.

On the other hand, "there are far too many monopolies, particularly in the food industry . . . for there to be any market of supply and demand operative."

Hanson said his office, which operated under the department of the attorney-general, has experienced a large increase in activity — investigating consumer complaints and enforcing consumer protection legislation — since it was formed in January 1970. This has been particularly true since "new MLAs have given us considerable attention," he said.

Bombers Ready for Hot Summer

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The flying firemen are ready for a hot summer.

Chief pilot L. B. Pearson, of flying Fireman Ltd. at Patricia Bay Airport, said: "Signs are it will be a bad fire season."

B.C. forests are already drying out without significant rainfall in months, and foresters anticipate the worst fire season in four years.

For its part, Flying Fireman has completed pilot training and aircraft overhauls in readiness for service anywhere in B.C. or Alberta.

An aircrew is on daily standby at Patricia Bay, where one of the company's six tanker planes is based.

Flying Fireman uses Canso amphibians, twin-engine flying boats used on wartime maritime patrols which are converted to carry tons of firefighting chemical and water-gel mixture in their bellies in place of anti-submarine bombs.

Two more tankers are based at Smithers and the remaining three are in Alberta.

Besides the water bombers themselves, the company uses light aircraft as spotters or "bird dog" planes which are leased for the role.

They usually carry forestry officers when guiding bombers to their targets over a fire. Standing by at Patricia Bay is a twin-engine Aero Commander, capable of 275 miles-an-hour passes over a blaze.

One crew for each plane and one standby crew makes a total of about 20 pilots now ready for what summer may bring.

The company may be called out by the B.C. Forest Service or by private logging, pulp and paper companies to protect forest holdings.

Aircraft will be based wherever conditions prove worst during fire season, and if the company's own resources are not enough there are arrangements to procure additional tankers from other areas, Pearson said.

Muzzle Denied By Head Office

Employees at Jordan River were not told to shut up about mine tailing pollution, a Rayonier (Canada) Ltd. official said today.

"We don't do that sort of thing," Hank Hansen of Vancouver said. "But whether pressure was exerted on the people at a local management level, I don't know."

The superintendent of Puget Sound Lumber Company, the Rayonier subsidiary at Jordan River, was not available for comment.

Hansen was commenting on a charge by Capital Regional Board Director Howard Elder that CPSLC told residents not to get involved in the controversy over Jordan River Mines Ltd. discharging mine tailings near a recreational beach.

Elder said Wednesday the people won't protest because of company pressure.

Derrick Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment (C.A.S.E.), said the apparent muzzle being placed on employees of CPSLC to squelch complaints of mine tailings polluting the beach "is an abrogation of human rights."

On the pollution issue, Mallard said he has observed the discharge from the pipe.

"Anyone who is not blind can observe discoloration of the beach for several hundred yards in addition to excessive turbidity of the water," he said.

"I suspect the shell life there is heavily contaminated," he added.

Mallard said he understands the B.C. government has air photographs which show the mine's effluent patterns along this section of the coast.

"We would like the government to release these for publication," he said. "Warning notices that the beach is contaminated should also be erected.

The Pollution Control Branch is investigating.

Anderson Affair Soothed

Things have been smoothed over between the inter municipal magistrates' court committee and senior city prosecutor Wallace Anderson, according to Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

News reports early this week quoted Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, a member of the court committee, accusing Pollen of wanting to fire Anderson as soon as possible.

Curtis boycotted a meeting of the court committee Wednesday after saying he wanted nothing to do with Pollen's firing plans.

Pollen said in an interview after the closed committee meeting that Anderson had been interviewed and matters of personnel in the prosecutors' office had been discussed.

Members of the committee also apologized to Anderson for the discussion of personnel matters in the news media, Pollen said. The mayor reiterated his concern over Mayor Curtis' disclosure of personnel issues.

A senior prosecutor in the city department, which handles cases for all four inner municipalities, is moving elsewhere and the staff situation is under review by the court committee which meets only sporadically.

Earlier this week Victoria city council passed a vote of confidence in the chief city planning officer and the traffic engineer, both of whom had been named as possible victims of a rumored purge of city hall staff. Anderson was not named in the vote of confidence.

Mine Permit Extension Granted

Jordan River Mines Ltd. has been granted a three-year reclamation permit to continue working on its Vancouver Island copper mining operation.

A mining company must have a reclamation permit before it can proceed with ore removal.

The company posts a bond, guaranteeing to restore the property as it proceeds. The land is to be restored to a standard set by the provincial reclamation committee, a inter-departmental group established by the provincial government.

The company must apply to renew the permit after three years.

Optometrists Eye UVic For Training Centre

University of Victoria is the site preferred by the Canadian Association of Optometrists for a school of optometry in Western Canada, UVic president Dr. Hugh Farquhar said Wednesday.

The association and various governments are considering starting such a school to relieve a shortage of optometrists in Canada, Farquhar told the senate at its monthly meeting in the Cornett Building.

He said he believed that governments of the western provinces have already agreed to establish a school of optometry.

"According to my report, Victoria is the preferred site," Farquhar said.

He suggested that senate show some interest in UVic having the school or the governments will "look elsewhere" for a site.

Senate unanimously passed a motion to look into the possibility of a school of optometry here.

Capital costs of the school would be paid by the federal government, operating costs by the provincial government, Farquhar said.

Senate also approved in principle creation of an experimental environmental studies program, consisting mainly of courses already offered at the university.

However, the specific program outlined by a senate ad hoc committee in its report has run into opposition from some faculty members, so chances of the program starting this fall are slim.

Senate asked the ad hoc committee to look at the program again and try to meet various faculty objections.

Dr. Robert Reid, speaking for the committee, pointed out that "departmental jealousies" are the reason no such environmental program has been established at Simon Fraser University or University of British Columbia.

Senate member Barbara Corry expressed concern about delays in starting the program, when similar programs are under way all over the continent.

"We are foolish if we don't stipulate some effort to get the first year of this program under way this fall," she said.

In other business, senate approved changes in the university library's book loan policy which will put students and faculty on an equal footing for the first time.

Loan period for students and faculty is now up to four months. Previously a faculty member could take a book out for a year, an undergraduate for two weeks and a graduate student for a month.

Faculty and students will be subject to a $1 per day fine for each overdue book. At present faculty members are not fined for overdue books.

Senate also agreed to reduce the normal admittance age for mature students from 24 to 21.

Gordon to Head Math Dept.

Dr. William Gordon, 38, associate professor of mathematics at the University of Victoria, will become head of the mathematics department July 1.

He replaces Phoebe Noble, acting head of the department since 1971 and a faculty member of UVic and Victoria College for over 25 years, who is going on study leave next year.

Gordon is stepping down as associate dean of arts and science, a position he had held since last July. He came to UVic in 1965 and was made assistant dean of arts and science in 1969.

FORD OFFERS UVIC 'INNOVATIVE' FUND

Ford Motor Company will pay for some innovative program at the University of Victoria if UVic can come up with one.

Ford's offer was announced to UVic senate Wednesday by president Dr. Hugh Farquhar.

He invited senate members to submit briefs on new and different programs that might appeal to Ford.

Pressed for a figure on the size of Ford's grant, Farquhar answered: "I would hate to suggest a figure, but if I did it would be a big round one with lots of zeros."

"I've tried them out on environmental studies," said Farquhar, but everybody's doing environmental studies these days.

"No wonder they're not interested in environmental studies," quipped Dr. Izzud-Din Pal.

Gun Curbs Wanted, But Not U.K. Law

RCMP Assistant Commissioner Gordon Cunningham favors strict gun laws but doesn't think legislation being considered by the British government would be acceptable to Canadians.

The British government has proposed banning toy guns which look too much like the real ones, and wants to prevent gun collecting as a hobby.

"We need stricter laws," he said. "There are just too many weapons abroad in our society."

He disclosed that in a period of 13 months, 67 persons were found with weapons in their possession.

"This is too heavy an incidence to overlook," he stated. "We are apprehensive."

Cunningham didn't know why Britain, which has always had stricter gun laws than Canada and the United States is considering tougher controls.

"But it is interesting to note that the London Metropolitan Police Force, which carries no guns, is now having difficulty enlisting recruits," he said.

"Britain has a much tighter social order than the U.S. or Canada," he added. "It is my guess they are thinking of the future. They are taking preventive measures — not waiting for conditions to deteriorate.

"But here in British Columbia there is nothing to prevent a man with the money from buying every gun in a sporting goods shop," he said.

HAFER MACHINISTS SETTLE STRIKE

Fifteen employees of Hafer Machine Company Limited, 1720 Store, returned to work today after negotiations Wednesday ended a three-day strike.

Agreement was reached between the company and Local 456 of the International Association of Machinists on a new two-year contract providing a pay raise of $1.15 an hour, in two stages, and improvements in the health and welfare plan and annual vacations, said union business agent Hugh Weydert.

Hourly wage before the settlement was $5.10, he added.

Addict's Wish: Jail

A 25-year-old man who asked for a two-year sentence in B.C. Penitentiary to cure his heroin addiction got his wish today.

"Not everyone has your courage," Judge William Ostler told Robert James McRae, of no fixed address.

The man had requested a lengthy sentence in the penitentiary, where he could get psychiatric advice to break the heroin habit.

McRae was sentenced Wednesday to six months after pleading guilty to a heroin possession charge, He had been picked up by police Wednesday morning.

Today, the man pleaded guilty to a March 8 heroin possession charge arising from a drug squad raid on a Pandora apartment. During a struggle with officers a balloon containing 17 capsules of heroin was forced from the man's mouth.

McRae, living on $300 a month unemployment insurance money, had $420 in bills of various denominations at the time of his arrest, said Prosecutor Mike Hutchison.

"I wish you luck," was the judge's final comment.

Mitchell, Stans Facing Charges

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Former Nixon cabinet members John Mitchell and Maurice Stans were indicted today on charges they sought to obstruct an investigation by a federal agency in exchange for a secret $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon re-election campaign.

The federal grand jury also indicted financier Robert Vesco, who made the contribution, and Harry Sears, a former republican leader of the New Jersey senate, who testified earlier he delivered the money to Stans in Washington.

Mitchell, former attorney general, and Stans, former secretary of commerce, had earlier testified before the grand jury investigating the contribution by Vesco to the Nixon campaign.

Vesco left the country while the matter was under investigation. Mitchell at the time said he testified "fully, frankly and freely."

Vesco, 37, was under federal investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission at the time the money changed hands. He and 41 others had been accused in a civil suit by the SEC with milking four foreign mutual funds of $224 million and is now believed to be in Costa Rica.

Former White House counsel John Dean, meanwhile, claimed today that "there is a concerted effort to get me" and vowed again that he would not take the blame for other top administration officials in the Watergate scandal. He will testify before a Senate committee investigating the affair, Friday.

Dean's statement followed a series of reports about him — some saying he was prepared to link Nixon to bugging cover-up efforts and some saying both government and senate investigators had concluded that Dean had no such evidence.

In his statement, Dean said the information contained in unspecified news stories was "neither complete nor accurate," but declared that "truth will emerge" ultimately in the Watergate case.

"Efforts have been made to prevent me from obtaining relevant information and records; attempts have been made to influence the handling of my testimony by the prosecutors; restrictions have been placed on the scope of my testimony as it relates to the White House; and blatant efforts have been made to publicly intimidate me," Dean said.

U.S. Would Expel Canada

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The United States is trying to expel Canadian fishboats from American waters on both the East and West Coasts, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis charged Wednesday.

His comments came after Cliff Levelton, director-general of fisheries operations for Canada, announced the collapse of Canada-United States treaty talks in Seattle.

Levelton said he gave formal 60-day notice Tuesday to the U.S. that Canada will extend salmon net fishing to the 12-mile limit and lengthen the trolling season to give Canadian fishermen a bigger share of the Pacific catch.

One of the Canadian changes will allow Canadian vessels that net salmon off the west coast of Vancouver Island to operate out to the 12-mile limit. At present such craft can fish only within headland-to-headland lines drawn across the mouths of bays and inlets.

Levelton said the talks broke down because Canada wanted to cut the U.S. share of Fraser River sockey and pink salmon to one-quarter from the one-half set out in the 1937 International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Treaty.

"Talks just bogged down," Levelton said. "We are being treated unfairly, yet there was no attempt by the Americans to reach accommodation in a moderate way."

He said the Canadian mission, which he led, proposed an interim solution, but this also was rejected.

It suggested that each country reduce by five per

CONSUMERS 'SPOILED'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has accused price-conscious consumers of being "spoiled" by low food costs.

"I know consumers are angry about rising food prices," he said in a speech to the Ottawa-Carleton Liberal Association, "the fact of the matter is that consumers have been spoiled by the low food prices we have been enjoying for more than 20 years."

Consumers have been spending less and less of their income on food, while receiving higher and higher quality and built-in convenience."

Whelan, a southwestern Ontario farmer, has been the Liberal cabinet's most vociferous spokesman at a time when consumer groups have organized to boycott products in an effort to curb rising costs.

But Prime Minister Trudeau has said the minister is merely speaking his own mind when he comments on the subject.

Whelan said Wednesday that improved farm efficiency has made the "slow rate of price increase" for food possible. But poor weather last year cut into production, particularly in the east, and prices moved up accordingly.

World droughts last year, rising demand for red meat and a poor fish catch off Peru this year also contributed to increased costs. Fish is used for protein in livestock feed.

To offset increases, Whelan again called for all-out farm production and ambitious marketing efforts by the government.

New Crisis Facing Dollar

LONDON (UPI) — Rumblings of a possible new international money crisis developing in European markets again brought the U.S. dollar under pressure today.

The price of gold continued its ominous rise and banks and dealers said the movements were almost carbon copies of preludes to previous crises.

The run on the dollar began Wednesday with a strengthening of the West German mark, occasioned by reports that Bonn intended to revalue its currency and take fresh counter-inflation measures. The rumors were denied later in the day.

"In March there was only a rumor of a new dollar devaluation. Now there are renewed fears following the Watergate affair and the looming crisis in the Middle East," a top money man said here today.

The pound continued strong, selling against the U.S. dollar at $2.50735. By mid-day it moved to another peak of $2.50875.

Gold in London touched a new peak fixing of $94.60, up $1.60 from Wednesday's close.

"There was no real sign of a recovery in the dollar, but the weakness may be cushioned by the Thursday settlement factors that usually aid U.S. currency," one foreign dealer said.

The dollar rallied a little in Frankfurt, changing hands at 2.8355 marks.

In Bonn, the government today proposed heavy new taxes on income and investment and further liberalization of imports as part of a frontal attack on a boom that is pushing prices up at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent.

Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt and Economics Minister Hans Friderichs told a news conference the cabinet approved the 21-point package of anti-inflationary measures at an after-dinner session Wednesday night.

"The main purpose of this program is to reduce purchasing power and liquidity and pressure on prices, which therefore should end anticipation of price rises in wage negotiations," Friderichs said.

ICCS Going Broke

Times News Services

SAIGON — The peace supervisory force in Vietnam is in danger of losing some of its essential services unless it receives a new injection of capital soon to pay private contractors.

The commission requested additional financial support about two weeks ago from the four parties to the Paris peace agreement sources said today. But so far no replies have been received and resources are rapidly running out.

The commission has already received initial payments of about $1 million from each of the parties.

However, the ICCS has been unable, for a variety of reasons, to draw up a firm operating budget which would set out specific requirements. Therefore, it has asked for a matching payment to the initial one.

One ICCS source commented that "since the four parties seem to want us here, it's a little puzzling there has been no action."

Meanwhile, private contractors who supply most of the basic services for the ICCS are becoming extremely reluctant to continue their operations without payment.

The old International Control Commission had a dismal credit record, resulting at one time in companies cutting off water supplies to the Canadian delegation.

Many local firms seem to fear that the ICCS is following the same trend.

Meanwhile, military sources said today in Phnom Penh Communists had shifted the brunt of their offensive Wednesday from there to the northern part of the country.

Fierce fighting both north and south of the capital claimed heavy casualties, however.

Border War Rages On

United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas attacked Lebanese army posts at a half dozen points along the 150-mile Syrian -Lebanese border today, and Tel Aviv dispatches said Israel had sent a brigade of battle-hardened troops to the occupied Golan Heights near the battle area as a "routine summer training exercise."

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv refused to say how long the exercises had been planned.

They involve planes, tanks, artillery and helicopters. Censorship prohibits disclosure of how many men are in the brigade.

Arab leaders, meanwhile, conferred in Beirut and other capitals on ways to preserve the third Lebanese ceasefire in eight days of fighting between guerrillas and the army.

There was scattered shooting in Beirut today but military leaders lifted the 24-hour curfew twice to let residents buy food.

Despite the cease-fire, the Labanese army called up "specialized reservists." It said all reservists, except officers, "should report to their regional headquarters for the military authorities to select the required number."

Evidence of big power fears of worsening Middle East situation also came from Beirut where Soviet Ambassador Servar Azimov conferred minutes with president Suleiman Franjieh during which Beirut radio said he delivered an oral message from the Kremlin leaders.

Contents of the message were not disclosed but both U.S. and Soviet diplomatic sources have expressed hope there would be no major explosion before the summit conference this summer between President Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev.

Diplomatic sources in London reported earlier this week that the United States had made similar representations to Israel.

U.S. Steel Price Up

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The U.S. Steel Corp. today announced a 4.8 per cent price increase on its sheet and strip products which are widely used in the production of automobiles and household appliances.

Other producers were expected to follow U.S. Steel's lead.

The United States' largest steelmaker said the increases would become effective with shipments of June 15. The price hikes were well within the limits established by the economic stabilization program, it said.

Borrowers Booked

PHOENIX, Ariz. (Reuter) — During the past six months, 133 persons have been arrested and five jailed for failing to return overdue books or pay library fines. Librarian R. W. 4,000 Deported

OTTAWA (CP) — An estimated 4,000 visitors were ordered deported during 1972, the Commons was told Wednesday in a written response to a question by Steve Paprowski (PC—Edmonton centre). No precise figures were available, the government said. There were 11,875 people awaiting deportation hearings by the immigration appeal board at the end of December.

Two Kidnapped

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — An 11-year-old boy and a 20-year-old man were kidnapped here today, the first such incidents since the military government imposed a death penalty for abductions under the martial law declared May 1. The new cases were the 38th and 39th reported in Argentina this year.

Lull Broken

BELFAST (UPI) — The army said gunmen shot and killed a part-time soldier in an ambush at the end of a country lane today, Northern Ireland's first death in secular violence in nearly a week. The killings, and Ulster's 3001st bomb blast that injured a mother and her four children in Protestant - Catholic rioting during the night, broke a four-day lull that began after three British soldiers were killed Saturday in booby-trap explosions.

Canada Comes First

TORONTO — Canadian oil companies say they won't export extra gasoline to the fuel-hungry United States until they are sure Canadian customers have enough.

Imperial Oil Ltd., a subsidiary of Exxon in the U.S., said it has been "barraged" with requests for gasoline from dealers south of the border.

"We haven't had much surplus lately anyway and that is the only gasoline we would consider exporting," a spokesman said Wednesday.

The company's last sale of gasoline to the U.S. was a surplus one million gallons from the Winnipeg refinery in January, he said.

U.S. oil companies have said they expect gasoline shortages in some parts of the country this summer.

Any shortages in Canada this summer will likely hit independent, not name-brand dealers, he said.

However, Lawrence Woodruff, president of CFM Ltd., Toronto, said present gasoline supplies are tighter than usual. CFM, a jobber, buys surplus gasoline from refineries and sells it to independents.

"I think there will be a squeeze on the independents and I think some marginal ones will have to close because they never should have been

DINNER STACKED

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time in years, President Nixon drew less than a million-dollar gate Wednesday night, when he spoke at a Republican fund-raising dinner at the Washington Hilton hotel.

Surveying a $1,000-a-plate audience of 1,500 — more than one-third of them freeloaders — Nixon said:

"I shall always remember this group tonight — remember that when the going was tough, you hung in there."

Making his first major public appearance since the Watergate scandal triggered a series of top-level resignations from his administration, Nixon told the faithful: "I don't stand here tonight as a loser. We are winners."

He promised to make the next four years "better than the last four."

Sponsors said the event would gross about $750,000 and net perhaps $600,000.

Two years ago at a similar dinner, the receipts totalled about $1.5 million. Last September, a nation-wide set of Republican banquets, linked by closed-circuit television, grossed over $6 million for a single Nixon speech.

Dealer May Be Their Only Firenza

Owners of Firenzas, the trouble-ridden cars imported by General Motors, will probably get compensation from car dealers before they get it from the manufacturer, according to Michael Hanson, provincial consumer affairs director.

"Anyone who has followed the case will see that, so far, the people who have got satisfaction (in unloading their cars) have got it from the dealers," he told a meeting of the Grace McInnes NDP Club Wednesday.

He said he has "no doubt there will be court action before this thing is settled."

And, he said, he expected the provincial Sale of Goods Act would be the legislation which would apply.

Under this well-tested act, it is the seller who must assume primary responsibility for the quality of the goods he sells. The seller in turn, of course, would have recourse against the firm that sold him the product.

Hanson noted that recent amendment to the Sale of Goods Act prevented sellers from waiving their primary responsibility through the manufacturers' warranty.

Hanson told the meeting if the market of supply and demand has been upset, it is the fault of both consumers and merchants.

"Shopping in just one or two shops, rather than shopping around for the best buy in each item, clearly destroys the concept of the market of supply and demand," he said.

On the other hand, "there are far too many monopolies, particularly in the food industry . . . for there to be any market of supply and demand operative."

Hanson said his office, which operated under the department of the attorney-general, has experienced a large increase in activity — investigating consumer complaints and enforcing consumer protection legislation — since it was formed in January 1970. This has been particularly true since "new MLAs have given us considerable attention," he said.

Land 'Thaw' Soon—Stupich

STUPICH
. . . three more weeks

A provincial land commission "could be rolling within three weeks," Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich told Victoria Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

Establishment of the commission, coupled with quick completion of land cataloguing by the Capital Regional District, would probably allow the five-month-old agricultural land freeze to be lifted within 90 days on southern Vancouver Island.

The minister was guest speaker at a general meeting of the chamber attended by more than 100 members in Empress Hotel.

"I wish I could tell you the land commission will be established tomorrow," Stupich said, explaining that recently the out-of-town demands upon ministers has made attendance at regular cabinet meetings sparse.

"Once the commission is named it will issue instructions pursuant to the legislation (Land Commission Act)."

He said the designation of agricultural land would be up to regional districts and maps are now being issued by the agriculture department suggesting types of land suitable for cultivation and those less suitable, or likely construction sites.

Stupich said he understood the Capital Regional District is well along with its plans to designate the various types of land and that the district could come within the 90-day period for approval following public hearings.

"When a regional district complies, then the freeze within that district will be lifted," the minister said.

He noted that although the cabinet's order imposing the freeze last November had specified only land taxed as agricultural, subdivision of all types of undeveloped land ceased in B.C.

There are many areas on Vancouver Island, he said, where development of non-agricultural land stopped or was not undertaken.

"People panicked," Stupick said. "In some cases approving officers panicked . . . people were a little afraid of doing anything for fear of doing something wrong.

"My advice now is, hang on a bit more — things will be better," Stupich said.

The minister, whose home riding is Nanaimo, said he supported chamber efforts to have later ferry sailings from Swartz Bay to the mainland, and for a third crossing between the mainland and Vancouver Island in order to provide easy access to services which residents of Gabriola will demand as 3,500 land parcels are developed.

The number of parcels that exist now will support a population of 10,000 Stupick said. In order to preserve the character of the island it will be necessary to give residents an easy way to reach commercial services, with a minimum of services on Gabriola.

Steel Rollback Call?

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray told the House of Commons Wednesday he will consider asking Canada's steel companies to maintain current prices for structural steel rather than hike them as announced Monday by major producers.

However, replying to a question from David Orlikow (NDP Winnipeg North), Gray made no more commitment except to say that he would "be happy to consider" the Manitoba MP's plea.

Orlikow described the new price increases as "unconscionable."

The veteran socialist said serious consequencies will result from the new price increases.

What's more, charged Orlikow, the steel companies don't need to charge any more for their products.

"The profits of steel companies showed an increase this year as compared to last year of 60 per cent," Orlikow pointed out.

Man Branded By Cellmate At Request

ODESSA, Tex. (UPI) — A cellmate, using razor blades, wire, and burning paper for heat, branded confessed murderer Johnny Meadows in a Dallas jail at Meadows' own request, Texas Attorney-General John Hill said Wednesday.

Meadows had claimed jail officials in Odessa burned four imprints of the state of Texas into his back. Meadows' attorneys showed photograps of the brands at a pre-trial hearing in Dallas, April 28 and the judge ordered a formal state investigation.

The last initial of each of four women Meadows has confessed to killing was branded inside the state imprints. But Hill said during the course of the investigation Meadows confessed that the brands were done in a community cell of the Dallas jail by another prisoner at Meadows' request.

"This map was outlined on paper and traced onto Meadows' back by a fellow inmate," Hill said. "A wire from a mop and broom was shaped to form the map of Texas, and another wire was shaped for the initials. The wires were heated by use of paper fire bombs."

Hill said the reason Meadows gave for having this done "was to get back at officers in Ector County, Texas, (Odessa)."

Hill's report absolved authorities in Dallas and Odessa of any blame.

Second Trial Monday

Trial for Ernest Layern Hotvedt, charged with the non-capital murder of his wife in Victoria Nov. 5, begins Monday in New Westminster.

Hotvedt, 28, was charged after his wife Linda, 28, was found dead in her apartment at 1255 Balmoral.

After four days of testimony which began in Victoria Jan. 8, a B.C. Supreme Court jury was unable to reach a verdict and Mr. Justice Douglas E. Andrews ordered a new trial.

Prosecutors are Alan Bigelow and Robert Edwards. Defence counsel is Dermod Owen-Flood.

Tutors of Deprived Again Bid for Aid

Another appeal will be made to Greater Victoria school board next week for funds to establish special tutoring for deprived children.

Victoria Self Help Society first approached the board with its scheme for "Outreach Tutoring" last month but was told the administration recommended against the program and trustees wanted more information.

The society wants $11,638 to set up the program, which would involve one full-time salaried director to co-ordinate the work of 20 volunteer university education students working with low income families.

Low income children, they say, often have unique problems in school because of their social background and the lack of learning resources in the home.

The tutoring program would allow a volunteer to go into the home and set up a "realistic home study program" for the child, taking into consideration his actual living conditions.

The society, under the direction of Mrs. Judith McCandless, plans to re-submit its brief to the board Monday with additional information and arguments.

They contend the school board should not have complete control over the project since school personnel "are not familiar with low income problems" and their efforts to help these children "lead to frustration for everyone involved."

"Therefore," the brief says, "we would like to see a member of the low income society placed, if not as director, then as an adviser to the director."

The project will not conflict with the Victoria Teachers' Project now in operation at Beacon Hill School because that group deals only with slow learners while "Outreach" will help only the low income child who is falling behind, the brief says.

Children will be referred to the group by family social workers and only children between the ages of 6 and 12, who are living with one parent, will be tutored.

Tutors will have at least three years of university and will receive additional training in individual tutoring from UVic educational psychologist Dr. Ron Tinney as well as instruction in low-income life from Mrs. McCandless.

"Our point is that we'll be offering something different from the school," says Mrs. McCandless.

"The cultural environment of the school assumes a middle-class kind of lifestyle that low income children have never experienced.

"A tutor will help these children set up a home study environment and bring in resource material so they won't start falling behind in school," she said.

Mrs. McCandless is a single parent and has been a teacher in Sooke school district.

MISSIONARY WALKATHON

A 14-mile walkathon will highlight a three-day missionary conference May 18-20 at the Free Methodist Church.

Young church members making the walk May 19 will raise money to help build a hospital in Zaire, Africa, in an area where 100,000 people are without medical facilities.

Guest speakers at the conference will be Warren. Johnson, a missionary for 20 years in South Africa, and Ken McVety of Tokyo, director of the Word of Life Press, largest producer of Christian literature in Asia.

The conference, open to the public, begins May 18 at 7:30 p.m.

Mining 'Under Cloud'

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — The president of the Mining Association of Canada, C. R. Elliott of Toronto, said Wednesday that uncertainty about provincial government tax intentions hangs like a cloud over the industry.

He said the NDP governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have "seriously undermined the confidence of those engaged in exploration." The exploration and mining industries are also under sharp attack from ecologists, he said.

Speaking to the Great Plains Project, Mr. Elliott said other provinces probably are studying the extent to which taxes on mining can be increased without disturbing the health of the provincial economy.

In the Northwest Territories, he said, mining companies will have to furnish costly social amenities to attract workers, and the companies won't shoulder such expenses without the prospect of a reasonable profit level.

"If the government of Canada and the provinces do not take steps to clear up this unhappy political atmosphere, they will indeed find the private sector disappearing from the exploration for new mines."

Keith O'Brien of Toronto, a taxation specialist with International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., suggested the federal government either subsidize prices or remove all taxes on fuels and gas in the Northwest Territories to spur developments.

He said the Canadian government could make all people residing north of the 60th parallel exempt from income tax. This would cost the government only $10 million a year.

Gordon Morris, one of about 250 experts in gas, oil, transport and mining technology drawn to the conference on the Churchill Arctic corridor, said incentives are offered to Russians in Siberia.

DATSUN 1200 carries on the tradition of the classic 2-door coupe.

The 2-door coupe has made automotive history. It's tough, it's quick. And traditionally, it looks a lot sportier than its bigger brothers. When Datsun set out to design the best 2-door coupe around, we stuck to the principles that made the coupe a classic.

The '37 Ford Coupe (centre right) gave you maximum comfort in its day. For its time, the '39 Packard Opera Coupe (centre left) handled like a dream. Our own 1932 Datsun coupe (that's it in the background) was one of the toughest, most dependable cars built that year.

In the Datsun 1200, we've simply updated these features with a large dollop of modern technology and the feel for good, solid auto building that's been our trademark over the last 40 years. So when you want tough, quick, sporty transportation, we think our Datsun 1200 is all you really need.

U.S. Would Expel Canada

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The United States is trying to expel Canadian fishboats from American waters on both the East and West Coasts, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis charged Wednesday.

His comments came after Cliff Levelton, director-general of fisheries operations for Canada, announced the collapse of Canada-United States treaty talks in Seattle.

Levelton said he gave formal 60-day notice Tuesday to the U.S. that Canada will extend salmon net fishing to the 12-mile limit and lengthen the trolling season to give Canadian fishermen a bigger share of the Pacific catch.

One of the Canadian changes will allow Canadian vessels that net salmon off the west coast of Vancouver Island to operate out to the 12-mile limit. At present such craft can fish only within headland-to-headland lines drawn across the mouths of bays and inlets.

Levelton said the talks broke down because Canada wanted to cut the U.S. share of Fraser River sockey and pink salmon to one-quarter from the one-half set out in the 1937 International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Treaty.

"Talks just bogged down," Levelton said. "We are being treated unfairly, yet there was no attempt by the Americans to reach accommodation in a moderate way."

He said the Canadian mission, which he led, proposed an interim solution, but this also was rejected.

It suggested that each country reduce by five per

Mitchell, Stans Facing Charges

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Former Nixon cabinet members John Mitchell and Maurice Stans were indicted today on charges they sought to obstruct an investigation by a federal agency in exchange for a secret $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon re-election campaign.

The federal grand jury also indicted financier Robert Vesco, who made the contribution, and Harry Sears, a former republican leader of the New Jersey senate, who testified earlier he delivered the money to Stans in Washington.

Mitchell, former attorney general, and Stans, former secretary of commerce, had earlier testified before the grand jury investigating the contribution by Vesco to the Nixon campaign.

Vesco left the country while the matter was under investigation. Mitchell at the time said he testified "fully, frankly and freely."

Vesco, 37, was under federal investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission at the time the money changed hands. He and 41 others had been accused in a civil suit by the SEC with milking four foreign mutual funds of $224 million and is now believed to be in Costa Rica.

Former White House counsel John Dean, meanwhile, claimed today that "there is a concerted effort to get me" and vowed again that he would not take the blame for other top administration officials in the Watergate scandal. He will testify before a Senate committee investigating the affair, Friday.

Dean's statement followed a series of reports about him — some saying he was prepared to link Nixon to bugging cover-up efforts and some saying both government and senate investigators had concluded that Dean had no such evidence.

In his statement, Dean said the information contained in unspecified news stories was "neither completa nor accurate," but declared that "truth will emerge" ultimately in the Watergate case.

"Efforts have been made to prevent me from obtaining relevant information and records; attempts have been made to influence the handling of my testimony by the prosecutors; restrictions have been placed on the scope of my testimony as it relates to the White House; and blatant efforts have been made to publicly intimidate me," Dean said.

CONSUMERS 'SPOILED'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has accused price-conscious consumers of being "spoiled" by low food costs.

"I know consumers are angry about rising food prices," he said in a speech to the Ottawa-Carleton Liberal Association, "the fact of the matter is that consumers have been spoiled by the low food prices we have been enjoying for more than 20 years."

Consumers have been spending less and less of their income on food, while receiving higher and higher quality and built-in convenience."

Whelan, a southwestern Ontario farmer, has been the Liberal cabinet's most vociferous spokesman at a time when consumer groups have organized to boycott products in an effort to curb rising costs.

But Prime Minister Trudeau has said the minister is merely speaking his own mind when he comments on the subject.

Whelan said Wednesday that improved farm efficiency has made the "slow rate of price increase" for food possible. But poor weather last year cut into production, particularly in the east, and prices moved up accordingly.

World droughts last year, rising demand for red meat and a poor fish catch off Peru this year also contributed to increased costs. Fish is used for protein in livestock feed.

To offset increases, Whelan again called for all-out farm production and ambitious marketing efforts by the government.

WHELAN

New Crisis Facing Dollar

LONDON (UPI) — Rumblings of a possible new international money crisis developing in European markets again brought the U.S. dollar under pressure today.

The price of gold continued its ominous rise and banks and dealers said the movements were almost carbon copies of preludes to previous crises.

The run on the dollar began Wednesday with a strengthening of the West German mark, occasioned by reports that Bonn intended to revalue its currency and take fresh counter-inflation measures. The rumors were denied later in the day.

"In March there was only a rumor of a new dollar devaluation. Now there are renewed fears following the Watergate affair and the looming crisis in the Middle East," a top money man said here today.

The pound continued strong, selling against the U.S. dollar at $2.50735. By mid-day it moved to another peak of $2.50875.

Gold in London touched a new peak fixing of $94.60, up $1.60 from Wednesday's close.

"There was no real sign of a recovery in the dollar, but the weakness may be cushioned by the Thursday settlement factors that usually aid U.S. currency," one foreign dealer said.

The dollar rallied a little in Frankfurt, changing hands at 2.8355 marks.

In Bonn, the government today proposed heavy new taxes on income and investment and further liberalization of imports as part of a frontal attack on a boom that is pushing prices up at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent.

Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt and Economics Minister Hans Friderichs told a news conference the cabinet approved the 21-point package of anti-inflationary measures at an after-dinner session Wednesday night.

"The main purpose of this program is to reduce purchasing power and liquidity and pressure on prices, which therefore should end anticipation of price rises in wage negotiations," Friderichs said.

ICCS Going Broke

Times News Services

SAIGON — The peace supervisory force in Vietnam is in danger of losing some of its essential services unless it receives a new injection of capital soon to pay private contractors.

The commission requested additional financial support about two weeks ago from the four parties to the Paris peace agreement sources said today. But so far no replies have been received and resources are rapidly running out.

The commission has already received initial payments of about $1 million from each of the parties.

However, the ICCS has been unable, for a variety of reasons, to draw up a firm operating budget which would set out specific requirements. Therefore, it has asked for a matching payment to the initial one.

One ICCS source commented that "since the four parties seem to want us here, it's a little puzzling there has been no action."

Meanwhile, private contractors who supply most of the basic services for the ICCS are becoming extremely reluctant to continue their operations without payment.

The old International Control Commission had a dismal credit record, resulting at one time in companies cutting off water supplies to the Canadian delegation.

Many local firms seem to fear that the ICCS is following the same trend.

Meanwhile, military sources said today in Phnom Penh Communists had shifted the brunt of their offensive Wednesday from there to the northern part of the country.

Fierce fighting both north and south of the capital claimed heavy casualties, however.

Border War Rages On

United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas attacked Lebanese army posts at a half dozen points along the 150-mile Syrian -Lebanese border today, and Tel Aviv dispatches said Israel had sent a brigade of battle-hardened troops to the occupied Golan Heights near the battle area as a "routine summer training exercise."

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv refused to say how long the exercises had been planned.

They involve planes, tanks, artillery and helicopters. Censorship prohibits disclosure of how many men are in the brigade.

Arab leaders, meanwhile, conferred in Beirut and other capitals on ways to preserve the third Lebanese ceasefire in eight days of fighting between guerrillas and the army.

There was scattered shooting in Beirut today but military leaders lifted the 24-hour curfew twice to let residents buy food.

Despite the cease-fire, the Labanese army called up "specialized reservists." It said all reservists, except officers, "should report to their regional headquarters for the military authorities to select the required number."

Evidence of big power fears of worsening Middle East situation also came from Beirut where Soviet Ambassador Servar Azimov conferred minutes with president Suleiman Franjieh during which Beirut radio said he delivered an oral message from the Kremlin leaders.

Contents of the message were not disclosed but both U.S. and Soviet diplomatic sources have expressed hope there would be no major explosion before the summit conference this summer between President Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev.

Diplomatic sources in London reported earlier this week that the United States had made similar representations to Israel.

U.S. Steel Price Up

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The U.S. Steel Corp. today announced a 4.8 per cent price increase on its sheet and strip products which are widely used in the production of automobiles and household appliances.

Other producers were expected to follow U.S. Steel's lead.

The United States' largest steelmaker said the increases would become effective with shipments of June 15. The price hikes were well within the limits established by the economic stabilization program, it said.

Borrowers Booked

PHOENIX, Ariz. (Reuter) — During the past six months, 133 persons have been arrested and five jailed for failing to return overdue books or pay library fines. Librarian R. W. BELFAST (UPI) — The army said gunmen shot and killed a part-time soldier in an ambush at the end of a country lane today, Northern Ireland's first death in secular violence in nearly a week. The killings, and Ulster's 3001st bomb blast that injured a mother and her four children in Protestant - Catholic rioting during the night, broke a four-day lull that began after three British soldiers were killed Saturday in booby-trap explosions.

Canada Comes First

TORONTO — Canadian oil companies say they won't export extra gasoline to the fuel-hungry United States until they are sure Canadian customers have enough.

Imperial Oil Ltd., a subsidiary of Exxon in the U.S., said it has been "barraged" with requests for gasoline from dealers south of the border.

"We haven't had much surplus lately anyway and that is the only gasoline we would consider exporting," a spokesman said Wednesday.

The company's last sale of gasoline to the U.S. was a surplus one million gallons from the Winnipeg refinery in January, he said.

U.S. oil companies have said they expect gasoline shortages in some parts of the country this summer.

DINNER STACKED

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time in years, President Nixon drew less than a million-dollar gate Wednesday night, when he spoke at a Republican fund-raising dinner at the Washington Hilton hotel.

Surveying a $1,000-a-plate audience of 1,500 — more than one-third of them freeloaders — Nixon said:

"I shall always remember this group tonight — remember that when the going was tough, you hung in there."

Making his first major public appearance since the Watergate scandal triggered a series of top-level resignations from his administration, Nixon told the faithful: "I don't stand here tonight as a loser. We are winners."

He promised to make the next four years "better than the last four."

Sponsors said the event would gross about $750,000 and net perhaps $600,000.

Two years ago at a similar dinner, the receipts totalled about $1.5 million. Last September, a nation-wide set of Republican banquets, linked by closed-circuit television, grossed over $6 million for a single Nixon speech.

Dealer May Be Their Only Firenza

Owners of Firenzas, the trouble-ridden cars imported by General Motors, will probably get compensation from car dealers before they get it from the manufacturer, according to Michael Hanson, provincial consumer affairs director.

"Anyone who has followed the case will see that, so far, the people who have got satisfaction (in unloading their cars) have got it from the dealers," he told a meeting of the Grace McInnes NDP Club Wednesday.

He said he has "no doubt there will be court action before this thing is settled."

And, he said, he expected the provincial Sale of Goods Act would be the legislation which would apply.

Under this well-tested act, it is the seller who must assume primary responsibility for the quality of the goods he sells. The seller in turn, of course, would have recourse against the firm that sold him the product.

Hanson noted that recent amendment to the Sale of Goods Act prevented sellers from waiving their primary responsibility through the manufacturers' warranty.

Hanson told the meeting if the market of supply and demand has been upset, it is the fault of both consumers and merchants.

"Shopping in just one or two shops, rather than shopping around for the best buy in each item, clearly destroys the concept of the market of supply and demand," he said.

On the other hand, "there are far too many monopolies, particularly in the food industry . . . for there to be any market of supply and demand operative."

Hanson said his office, which operated under the department of the attorney-general, has experienced a large increase in activity — investigating consumer complaints and enforcing consumer protection legislation — since it was formed in January 1970. This has been particularly true since "new MLAs have given us considerable attention," he said.
